ALIBI DEFENCE PLANNED FOR REV. RICHESON

While citizens of Hyannis have been hanging in effigy the Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson, now in Charles Street Jail on a charge of murdering Avis Linnell of Hyannis by cyanide of potassium, the Boston police are trying to ascertain if any unauthorized person has been searching the accused clergyman's personal effects in his lodgings at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Carter, No. 147 Magazine street, Cambridge.

Captain McCarr of Boston Police Headquarters reported to-day to Chief Dugan that, when he went to Richeson's room yesterday, he found some one had been there ahead of him and had fixed up the room, because the pastor's effects had been removed. He did not believe the pastor had left the Edmands house to do this. Chief Dugan consulted Philip R. Dunbar, counsel for Richeson, who said that, when he went to the room as the accused man's attorney, he found the same condition, that the room had been fixed up.

PHILIP R. DUNBAR IS PASTOR'S COUNSEL.

All outside food has been barred from the pastor's cell.

Philip R. Dunbar said to-day that he was retained as counsel for Rev. Mr. Richeson, but that his father, former Judge James W. Dunbar, is assisting him in preparation of the defence.

"My father is considering certain aspects of the case and is also advising me," said Philip Dunbar.

Questioned in regard to the probable defence to be offered in behalf of the jailed pastor, he said:

"I cannot say just at this time. It is too early. I am to give out a statement later on but probably not for several days.

"Just what the defence will be, I cannot tell now."

Mr. Dunbar said that there is no prospect of Richeson making any statement for several days.

"He has not made any statement to the police," he added.

Fused Sleeps Soundly.

Though charged with one of the most atrocious murders the world ever knew, Pastor Richeson suffers loss of neither slumber nor appetite at Charles street jail.

His first prison supper last night consisted of coffee and bread, the regular prison fare for the final meal of the day. He ate heartily.

At 8 o'clock the accused minister was ready to go to bed. He lay down on the prison cot, which is not devised for overluxurious comfort at the best, and slept like a man without a care.

At morning he was awake and ready for breakfast. The man who had always chosen his food carefully, with due regard to dietetic effects, drank plenty of coffee and ate bread again. He was hungry.

For dinner he faced the prospect of roast pork and peas, providing he did not send out for something outside of the jail mess. To-morrow his Sunday dinner, unless he send out, will consist of a beef stew.

It was learned to-day that Avis Linnell, her mother, her married sister, Mrs. William J. McLean of Brockton, and Richeson were together in Boston on the Wednesday before the murder.

Mrs. McLean, the dead girl's sister, is at her old home in Hyannis with her parents. They are in a state of mental and physical collapse over the tragedy which has blasted their home.

Mrs. McLean has written to a friend in Brockton that, on Wednesday, October 11, she came to Boston with her mother. They met Avis and went with while a new Fall suit and hat were purchased for the girl. Pastor Richeson also met them at the South Station.

"Mr. Richeson seemed very pleasant," wrote Mrs. McLean.

The Rev. Arthur C. Archibald, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Brockton, expresses confidence to-day in Pastor Richeson. He says Richeson may have been indiscreet but will come out all right.

Pastor Leased House.

Ten days ago Richeson leased a home at No. 143 Magazine street, Cambridge, for $35 a month. He was to take possession the first of November. This house was to be the home for himself and his bride-to-be, Miss Violet Edmands, whose wedding was announced for October 31. Instead of being married on that day, however, Richeson will be in court for his continued hearing on the murder charge.

Invitations to the Richeson-Edmands wedding have been recalled. The orders given to Sexton George Lion of the First Baptist Church in Newton Centre, where the marriage was to have been solemnized, for elaborate floral decorations have been countermanded.

The fight for the life of Pastor Richeson began last night when his counsel and friends started to gather evidence to show that he did not meet Avis Linnell last week at the time when it is said the cyanide of potassium was given her.

Coincident with these efforts on the part of the clergyman's friends was the hanging of him in effigy at Hyannis, where the indignation of the people has reached the boiling point. Hyannis was the home of the victim of the crime—a crime that has aroused all of New England.

This placard was attached to the effigy at Hyannis: "Guilty—Read Lake evil, 2." This is the significant Bible verse referred to:

"It were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and he cast into the sea, than that he should offend one of these little ones."

Witnesses have been found to show that Richeson did not meet Miss Linnell last Friday or Saturday. On Friday it is declared he was at a Sunday School Convention in Rhode Island.

Mrs. Edmands, the mother of Violet Edmands, who was to have been married to the clergyman the last day of this month, the day now set for his hearing on a charge of murder, declared that the preacher was at her home all of Saturday afternoon.

Telephone Told Clew.

On the other hand the police have been able to establish that Richeson made an engagement by telephone to meet the girl last Saturday afternoon. It was on that day, the police believe, the poison was handed to the girl.

The efforts of the police were to-day directed to piecing Miss Linnell and Richeson in each other's company last Saturday, a few hours before she took the fatal poison.

Corroborative evidence that Richeson and Miss Linnell were together in the South Station on the afternoon and evening of Friday, October 13, is furnished by Dr. Leonard F. Wolfe, a dentist of Dorchester, who says he saw a couple he is certain was the pastor and the young music student in the waiting room about 8 o'clock.

Dr. Wolfe did not know either Miss Linnell or Richeson. His attention first was attracted to them by the troubled look on the girl's face and the nervousness and anxiety she manifested in talking to her companion. After the news of the Linnell tragedy became public and pictures of the dead girl and of the accused minister were printed in the AMERICAN, Dr. Wolfe recognized them as the man and woman he had seen in earnest conversation in the waiting room on that Friday evening. He is positive he is not mistaken.

"I was waiting for a train to Quincy," said Dr. Wolfe, "and my attention was attracted to a couple who sat directly opposite me. The girl was very pale, and my attention was attracted by the way she looked constantly into his face and picked nervously at his coat sleeve as she talked. She appeared to be troubled. Several times I heard her ask, 'Are you sure? Are you sure?'

"The man wore the expression of one in deep thought and appeared to be in constant worry."

The more surprising statement of Dr. Wolfe is that the man rode in the same car as far as Quincy, where he left the train and walked rapidly toward a Hough's Neck car. Dr. Wolfe did not see the girl after she and the man left the waiting room in the South Station and walked toward the branch postoffice.

The effigy of Richeson at Hyannis hung from the limb of a huge elm tree in the yard of the First Baptist Church, of which the Rev. Mr. Richeson was pastor. It was fully dressed in a derby hat, white collar, white saint the black Prince Albert coat, corduroy trousers and high black shoes.

Pinned to the coat was a large placard bearing the name "The Rev. Richeson."

Nailed to the foot of the tree was a large square board with the words in black paint:

"Guilte—Read Lake 17-2."

Pinned to this board was a small bit of white paper on which was printed:

This is no reflection on the church.

This effigy will be burned on the baseball field at 10 o'clock. Please let it hang. (Signed), Vig. Committee.

Just what time the effigy was hung is not known. People in the neighborhood say they heard voices in the neighborhood of the church at about 1 o'clock this morning.

George Nicholson of Main street, Hyannis, armed with an axe, climbed the tree to-day and cut the effigy down. He carried it back of the church to the side of the graveyard and sent for State Detective Ernest Bradford, who lives at Hyannis. Bradford took the effigy apart and examined the clothing. He found that the collar was No. 17 and bore the initials "E. M. D." There was also a name inside an inside pocket, but Bradford would not tell what it was. He took the clothing to his office.

To See if Law Was Broken.

"I'm going to run this thing down," he said. "I don't know whether any law was broken or not—I'll have to look that up. But if there was a law broken I'll find out who did it."

More than 100 people saw the cutting down of the effigy. One man, looking on, said:

"If that was in my yard I'd like to see anyone cut it down. He'd get a charge of buckshot for his trouble."

While the police do not attach great importance to the statements that the accused pastor and Avis Linnell were seen together in the South Station at different times on Friday afternoon and evening, October 13, being convinced that the fatal poison was given to her on the following day, they are puzzled by the contradictory statements regarding the movements of Richeson on that Friday.

Two reputable witnesses, one of them George Baker of Hyannis, a New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad employe, who knew both Miss Linnell and Richeson well and was familiar with the story of their broken engagement, is positive he saw them talking earnestly together at the Summer street entrance of the South Station on that Friday afternoon.

His attention was attracted to them, he says, by his knowledge of the story that their engagement had been broken off and his surprise at seeing them engaged in what was apparently a very serious conversation, caused him to stop and watch them for several minutes.

Then there is the statement of Dr. Wolfe, a Dorchester dentist, who declares that on that same Friday evening he saw two persons he is positive were Miss Linnell and Richeson in close conversation in the waiting room of the South Station from 8:05 to almost 8:30 o'clock and that the pastor rode to Quincy on the same train with him.

Against these positive statements are the equally positive ones of a pastor and several residents of the little village of Harrisville, a part of Pascoag, Rhode Island, as well as that of a leading Sunday School worker of Providence that Rev. Mr. Richeson spent that Friday afternoon and night in Harrisville. Arriving there early in the forenoon, they say, he addressed a Sunday school convention, spent the afternoon at the gathering and was a guest of the pastor of the village church at his home that night.

Talked Over Telephone.

What the police believe to be an important disclosure in the case has been made to them by Mrs. John F. Dunskin of No. 144 Magazine street, Cambridge. She told them that Richeson talked over the telephone from her home to somebody at the

Dramatic Church Scene As Richeson Flock Prays

By FRANK DALLAM.

When the Rev. Clarence Virgil Thompson Richeson was going to sleep in his cell—or at least trying to go to sleep—a few faithful members of his congregation were praying.

REMARKABLE SERVICE OF PRAYER.

Understand it. They were praying. PRAYING.

A man who wrote great stories—he was a Frenchman and the stories that he wrote have been put aside sometimes by critics who said they were not the proper kind of stories—once wrote in the book which made immortal his literary fame. The prayer words were like flowers. He said well, might almost say repressive instead of impressive.

No playwright could ever devise such a scene. No novelist could ever think of it. No stage manager could ever have reproduced the tableau. Repression ran through the entire scene, repression of the sincere sort such as will never be mimicked.

Forty Persons Present.

Only about forty persons, and about ten of the forty men, presented themselves at the vestry room of Mr. Richeson's church for the regular Friday night prayer meeting. Just before the meeting opened two little girls stood on the church steps. That in itself was an event to be commented upon.

The comment is obvious. But remarkment was piled upon wonderment when the next moment the elder of the two little girls walked into the dimly lighted little vestry room, removed her hat, and took her seat at the convert grand piano which did service for the church instead of an organ.

And then the curtain ascended upon a pathetic denouement. The Prayer began.

Not once through this most remarkable evening was the name of Clarence Virgil Thompson Richeson mentioned. Not once was reference made to the fact that Immanuel Baptist church of Cambridge had been drawn into crime. Not once was said that the man who had sat in the pulpit, who had picked his text from the Holy Book and asked each Sunday for a faithful congregation, was at that moment in a cell in Charles street jail.

Certainly it was now a time that the

But Mr. Wilson hardly represented the spirit of the meeting. It was the most reverent, solemn and impressive gathering that was ever collected under a roof, which made immortal his literary fame. The prayer meeting held in the vestry room of Immanuel Baptist Church was—

Solemn, Impressive Meeting.

They held a star chamber session, which we, in these days of publicity, don't care about. It was a man named Wilson who received the reporters after this secret meeting.

He said something which was odd coming from a churchman. He was asked what had taken place after the reporters had been banished and with the guest table that one could expect to come from a black mustache almost as large as a hotel portion, he said:

"Nothing took place. Now, run fellows go home and rock the baby. Forget that we've had a meeting here to-night. This has been a regular meeting of the Immanuel Baptist church and there isn't anything connected with it to make a newspaper story. We are going to hold the same meeting next Friday night and the Friday after."

"But Mr. Wilson," said one of the reporters, "we would like to know something about this meeting. We can't go home as you so kindly suggest."

"Oh, go home and rock the baby. And if you can't rock your own baby, rock some other fellow's baby."

SEEK TO PROVE ALIBI FOR MINISTER IN STRANGE POISON TRAGEDY

Friends of Richeson Try to Show He Did Not Meet Victim Last Week.

Y. W. C. A. home in Boston on Thursday afternoon, October 12, apparently making an appointment to meet that person on the following Saturday, and that during the conversation he said:

"I will see you then on Saturday."

The minister talked for fully twenty minutes, Mrs. Danskin told the police. She says that at one time he remarked to the person at the other end of the wire:

"It seems a long time until Saturday."

The story of the telephone conversation, as told by Mrs. Danskin to the police, is as follows:

About 6 o'clock in the afternoon, Mr. Richeson came to our house, from the home of Mr. Carter, across the street.

Heard Phone Number.

"Is Mr. Danskin at home?" he asked.

"No, he is down at the lake house," I responded.

"May I use your telephone?" asked Mr. Richeson.

"Certainly," I replied.

Mr. Richeson sat down at the telephone and at once called for Oxford 2247-6. He did not look in the telephone book and perhaps it was this fact that made me take a mental note of the number. I remained in the room and while I tried not to pay any special attention to his conversation I could not help hearing an occasional part of it.

The minister appeared to be in a jovial mood and to be having a very pleasant conversation. He talked in a low tone, but laughed frequently, interrupting a sentence to break off into quiet laughter.

"I will see you then on Saturday" was one sentence I could not help hearing. A little on I heard him say:

"It seems a long time until Saturday."

When the minister hung up the receiver and thanked me, he left the house directly. I couldn't help feeling curious as to with whom he had been talking and something impelled me to find out.

Number Was That of Y. W. C. A.

It took only a moment for me to make inquiry and I found out that Oxford 2247-6 is the number of the Young Women's Christian Association Home on Warrenton street, Boston.

Avis Linnell roomed at the home. According to testimony of other lodgers there she was called to the telephone about 6 o'clock on that same Saturday afternoon that the accused minister held the long telephone conversation with "Oxford 2247-6."

Avis Linnell, too, was heard laughing and talking merrily at the telephone. When she hung up the receiver she remarked to Miss Lucille Zeigler and other friends who were in the room:

"I have just made an engagement to lunch with my gentleman friend on Saturday."

Mrs. Danskin informed her husband that evening of the minister having used the telephone in their home and also confessed her curiosity about Oxford 2247-6, and her discovery that that was the number of the Y. W. C. A. home. After these facts in the death of Miss Linnell had become public, Mr. Danskin felt it his duty to inform the police and did so.

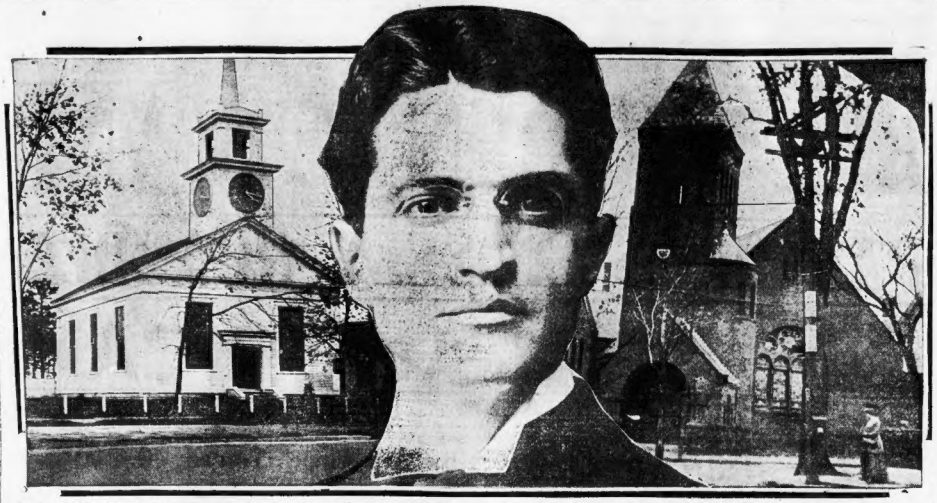
The police believe that Miss Lucille Zeigler, who was Avis Linnell's roommate at the Warrenton street home, will be one of the most important witnesses for the prosecution. Her testimony is regarded as so important, in fact, that she has been requested by the police not to talk to anyone concerning her knowledge of certain details.

It is regarded as certain that Miss Zeigler has given to the police facts, not yet made public, concerning her knowledge of the relations between Richeson and Miss Linnell and that some of these facts have a direct bearing on the whereabouts of the slain girl on last Saturday afternoon.

Riddle Dog Story.

That "gentleman friend" of Avis Linnell's was known by all her friends in the Y. M. C. A. home to be none other than the Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson. Many times had they rallied the little Ingenia girl on her acquaintance with the handsome young pastor of the Immanuel Church of Cambridge, and Avis laughingly had evaded their questions.

The police have established that the minister never owned a dog during his stay in Cambridge, Friends of Miss Linnell say Rev. Mr. Richeson told him that he wanted the crumbs of pretension to fill a dog. The dog idea was suggested to the police, later, by the police being in fact that the Carter family, with whom he boarded in Cambridge, owned a dog.



On the left is the plain little Baptist Church at Hyannis, which was the scene of minister's first pastorate and where he first won the love of Avis Linnell. The handsome and ornate edifice on the right is the fashionable Immanuel Baptist Church in Cambridge, of which Richeson became pastor after the time on knives supplanted the little Hyannis girl in his affections.

RECALL ECCENTRICITY OF RICHESON AT SEMINARY

Students at the Newton Theological Seminary, where Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson prepared for the ministry, do not hesitate to denounce the former divinity student because of his known friendship with pretty Avis Linnell before her tragic death while at the same time he was the fiance of Miss Violet Edmands.

"Richeson is best remembered at the Seminary because of his excellent address and altogether good-looking appearance," said a member of the institution. "He is also recalled here among the students, who are now in the senior class, as a man who kept his confidence to himself and rarely imparted any in men with whom he came in close contact.

"At times his reticence amounted to moodiness and many of the students will recall peculiar actions on his part. He was known to have fits in which he appeared he had no control over his nerves. At such a time he would rave and insist on shutting himself in a room alone and refuse to let to do anything for him.

"We attributed these spells to his presumed overstudy, for we believed he was most diligent in his books. Later, when he had these attacks and it became known that he was not a brilliant scholar in his courses, we laid his malady to a bad case of nerves.

"But what we are finding it hard to confuse was his role in that while he was the announced fiance of Miss Edmands, he also maintained his friendship with Miss Linnell.

"Furthermore, when Mr. Richeson was informed over the telephone that the Linnell girl was dying, and was asked to go to the Boston Y. W. C. A. building where she was, it was his plain duty as a minister to have done so.

"By refusing to answer the call he violated the ethics of the preacher and one of the most sacred obligations which rest upon the shoulders of all priests of the church.

"During his last year here he was regarded as very close-mouthed concerning his personal affairs. His closest friends in the Seminary knew very little of his At times he was very peculiar and acted as if under some great spell. ... sometimes some nervous disorder was generally believed, but it were difficult to account for his strange actions.

"He roomed with a student here alone during the last year at the Seminary, and on several occasions would be left from the room they occupied and shut himself in another room. He gave no reason for his action nor would permit of anyone trying to pacify him.

"At such times he would rave as if being tormented and nothing we would try to do for him availed anything."

Those of the upper classes who remembered the handsome, fun-loving student, moderated their surprise by referring to his unusual career at the institution. There is also manifest a great amount of sympathy for Miss Edmands, whose father and grandfather had shown their patronage of the Seminary.

Professor Winfred N. Donovan, secretary of the faculty at the Newton Theological Seminary, declares that Rev. Mr. Richeson was most irregular in his studies while at the school.

"Mr. Richeson was never a profound man in his studies and his record here shows him to have been an irregular student in his courses, due no doubt to his high nervous state," he said.

Mr. Hatch also said that there had been a visible change in the appearance of Mr. Richeson since he came to this state. When he was greeted by Richeson at police headquarters in Pemberton square, Mr. Hahn said Richeson was pale and drawn. He did not look like the same man to whom he had sold the poisonous drug.

People in Newton that knew Richeson are discussing the strange case. While the affair is not being talked of openly by his former friends and acquaintances, yet they are reviewing the many phases and sides of the case that baffled the police for a time, until Druggist Hahn gave to the police the information that made it possible for them to place a charge against an individual.

The drug store conducted by Mr. Hahn was the means for scores of curiosity seekers. Until a late hour they came from far and near. Under many pretexts they went to the store. Among the curious ones were many women. They came to the store and over a glass of soda stirred at Druggist Hahn. While they were bold enough to enter the place, none of them dared to ask any question. The druggist unwillingly stood the test of the many staring eyes.

DRUGGIST HAHN TELLS OF CHANGE IN MR. RICHESON

William Hahn, the Newton Centre druggist, who told the police that cyanide of potassium was purchased of him by Rev. Mr. Richeson, and which the police claim Richeson gave to Avis Linnell, told the AMERICAN last he regretted the notoriety that the case had given him, but declared that furnishing the police with the information that lead to the arrest of Richeson was the only thing that he could do, as a good citizen.

"It is surprising to me," said Mr. Hahn, "that Mr. Richeson did not go to a hardware store to purchase cyanide of potassium. I understand that it is very easy to procure and the drug is sold in bulk by the stores. He could have been able to procure any amount that he desired and without any question."

Mr. Hahn also said that there had been a visible change in the appearance of Mr. Richeson since he came to this state. When he was greeted by Richeson at police headquarters in Pemberton square, Mr. Hahn said Richeson was pale and drawn. He

PASTOR RICHESON IS REMEMBERED IN SOUTH CHELMSFORD

SOUTH CHELMSFORD, Oct. 21.—Some two years ago, the Rev. C. V. T. Richeson preached at the local Baptist church. He was not the regular pastor, but supplied for the Rev. Mr. Wells, who had resigned his pastorate. At that time Rev. Mr. Richeson was stationed at Hyannis. While he was supplying here, he arrived on Saturday night and remained until Monday morning.

He preached here for two months or longer. He made a very favorable impression. It is said of him by the parishioners of the Baptist church that he was good of appearance and seemed very sincere.

Prior to two years ago, when Richeson came to the town, a pastor who was not ordained could not administer communion. Richeson was called on two or three times by the parishioners to preside at the communion service.

RHEUMATISM

A Home Cure Given by One Who Had It.

In the spring of 1902 I was attacked by muscular and inflammatory rheumatism. I was laid up for six weeks. I had a doctor, but my trouble kept. I tried several other remedies and doctor after doctor, but each relieved me but was only temporary. Finally, I found a remedy that cured me completely and it has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted and even bedridden with rheumatism, and it effected a cure in every case.

I have no object in view from any form of rheumatism, trouble to let this marvelous healing power. Don't send a cent; simply mail your name and address and I will send it free to try. If after you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long-looked-for means of curing your rheumatism, you may send me the price of it, one dollar, understand, but I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer when positive relief is thus offered you free. Don't delay. Write to-day.

PASTOR IN JAIL CELL WHILE HIS FLOCK PRAYS

efficacy of prayer should be manifested. Waited over the housetops in Cambridge, over the choppiness of the Charles River waters down to the miserable Charles street jail, if there is anything in prayer, there must have gone some beautiful consolation to the man who sat in a cell charged with the death of a girl who trusted.

If that prayer meeting was impressive it was chiefly so on account of the absence of ceremony. They held it in what was called the vestry room. It was a small room. It took only seven incandescent globes to light it. The walls were plain. Not even a stained glass window to lend a theatrical effect to the picturesqueness of this absorbing chapter in the mystery which has aroused all New England.

Come to think about it, no stained glass windows were needed. The stage setting was severely plain. It was plain after the fashion of the Puritans. You remember the Puritans. They hardly those who came to the stern and rock-bound coast. The men who braved everything for a principle.

It was in such a room that the flock of the Rev. Clarence Virgil Thompson Richeson sat around and prayed. Prayed with all the earnestness and fervor that can emanate from human heart.

The meeting was presided over, "led" is the word which was supplied by Edward Watson. Mr. Watson must be a Christian. No man could ever have done what he did without inspiration. He was visibly nervous when he arose from a rather Episcopalian-looking chair behind a small lectern. His audience was nervous. It might be added, by way of a small touch of realism, that the newspapermen who formed a goodly portion of the congregation, were nervous themselves. Mr. Watson, who is a small man, but who offsets his physical diminution by a dignified bend, white as to hair and florid as to complexion, which, by the way of speaking, spells dignity in its own way, began his services by calling for a hymn.

He called it a hymn but they were not hymns which were sung. They were songs. Mr. Watson asked for one whichever they were, hymns or songs, and a voice came from no one knows, where said "Let us sing 125."

No. 125 in the songbook of Immanuel Baptist church, happens to be "Love Found a Way."

Well, they didn't sing it. Mr. Watson, with probably a clear idea of the fitness of things, asked for another hymn, and on page nine they found "My Jesus, I Love Thee."

The small congregation sang it with the soul of every man and woman poured into it with that degree of earnestness which never comes until there is a crisis.

While they were singing, the words of a motto hanging on the wall seemed to stand out in letters of fire. "If our religion is not true, we ought to change it," said this placard. "If it is true we are bound to propagate it. We can do it if we will."

Then came the keynote of the meeting. "I'm going to read," said Mr. Watson, "the 38th Chapter of the Book of Isaiah."

It is safe saying that few people outside of Biblical students have ever waded through the verbosity of Isaiah. As a matter of fact Mr. Watson himself had a hard time getting away with it and he had a Bible in front of him with print as big as the figures on a town clock. The point of the 38th Chapter of Isaiah reduced to plain words is that old King Hezekiah prayed. The King was sick. Isaiah the Prophet, and to go into details Isaiah, the son of Amoz, went to Hezekiah with the cheerful tidings that he was not to live.

Then Hezekiah turned his face toward the wall and prayed unto the Lord.

And said, remember now, O Lord, I beseech Thee how I have walked before Thee in truth and with a perfect heart and have done that which is good in Thy sight.

Continuing upon the sombre words of the 38th Chapter of Isaiah, Mr. Watson read to the end. He then announced a prayer. It was a prayer. Heads were bowed down humbly. Mr. Watson in words more homely and honest than eloquent, begged that Divine guidance and light might be shed upon the two or three gathered together in His name.

Dramatic Pause.

Just about this time of the procedure, a large, heavy-set person hustled into the little room, walked impressively down the right-hand aisle, walked as far as the wall hard by the pulpit would allow him, deposited an umbrella somewhere behind a steam radiator, stooped over and while he peered some words of mystery into the good left ear of Mr. Watson, and then took a seat on one of the plain wooden chairs which so sparsely filled the little auditorium. Just what Mr. Wilson said to Mr. Watson very probably will never be known. Maybe it was important, maybe not. Mr. Wilson, after the star chamber session, was too important to tell whether what he said to Mr. Watson was important or not, and Mr. Watson, in the general excitement, went home.

However, that's neither here nor there. This is mainly a story of how the Reverend Clarence Virgil Thompson Richeson's congregation gathered in the vestry room of his church in Cambridge and prayed while he slept on an iron bed in the Charles street jail.

Old King Hezekiah and his prayers furnished the substance of all that was said when Mr. Watson had finished the talk he made, following half a dozen more hymns. The meeting was a meeting of earnest men who needed a guide in troublesome time. They asked for it with earnest and hands reverently clasped.

Came a minute where there was a dramatic pause that is simply indescribable. A hymn had just been sung. The title of it was "God Will Take Care of You." It might be well to quote the chorus of this song:

> God will take care of you,
> Through every day,
> O'er all the way;
> He will take care of you.
> God will take care of you.

When the congregation had finished singing, Mr. Watson said "the meeting is now open. If there is anyone who desires to say something or to add his testimony we would like to hear it."

Mr. Watson coughed when he said this. Nobody spoke, for a second, and it was the longest second that can be reckoned upon counting a watch from any quarter of the room. Presently the baritone voice of a man, and it seemed to come from no especial spot in the house, boomed out the refrain of the preceding hymn, "God Will Take Care of You."

That baritone voice made a stamped. With lovable disregard of Mr. Watson or anybody else who might have been in the pastor's chair, the congregation sang the stanzas of "God Will Take Care of You," and never even let the little organ who presided at the piano get to the keyboard. The congregation merely wanted to vent itself. Though it sang, it was praying. It neither wanted nor required instrumental accompaniment.

Two more prayers, each in prose this time, were uttered. William Halbarton, a member of the financial committee of the church, made an impressive talk. He spoke of "the distressing places in life." He exhorted his fellow churchmen to be calm. "Don't talk," he said. "Just pray. Be like the great King Hezekiah and in this time of trouble turn your face toward the wall and pray unto the Lord."

Before a word could be spoken after the end of this forceful exhortation, the little girl at the piano sounded a chord and nodding toward Mr. Watson said, "Take Hymn 20."

The title of Hymn 20 in the songbook of the Immanuel Baptist Church is "Don't Stop Praying."

> Don't stop praying, the Lord is nigh
> That's what the Bible tells us over and over.
> Don't stop praying, He'll save you,
> Don't stop praying, He'll answer you.

When the stanzas of this song had been sung, Mr. Watson, still seated, passed a hand over his eyes and in a tone which nodding toward Mr. Watson said, "Take Hymn 20."

The title of Hymn 20 in the songbook of the Immanuel Baptist Church is "Don't Stop Praying."

> Don't stop praying, the Lord is nigh
> That's what the Bible tells us over and over.
> Don't stop praying, He'll save you,
> Don't stop praying, He'll answer you.

When the stanzas of this song had been sung, Mr. Watson, still seated, passed a hand over his eyes and in a tone which betrayed the troubles of his heart said, more to himself than to the assemblage, "and we wait."

To quote Mr. Wilson, the big fellow with the black eyebrows, this meeting had absolutely nothing to do with the predicament of the Rev. Clarence Virgil Thompson Richeson. "Nothing to it," said Mr. Wilson. "We hold meetings every Friday night and we'll have one next Friday. Meanwhile, Mr. Richeson is in Charles Street Jail."

For years and years, thousands of sufferers have been following the beaten path in the treatment of Asthma.—and they are still gasping and clutching for breath.

Quick Relief With My Treatment. Try It And Prove It.

The ordinary so-called "remedies" are but habitual failures. I have tried them all. I am a physician. Day and night for years I almost felt as if the hand of death was clutching at my throat, and that every breathless struggle would be my last.

I exhausted medical books in a vain search for a cure. At last I discovered my own treatment, used it, and if an angel had come and carried me suddenly away, I could not have been more surprised at its results.

I ask no asthma sufferer to believe me. I am known only by my works. I want to prove to you that this treatment not only actually cures, but cures permanently. I do not ask a cent. All you have to do is to send me your name and address and I will send you a free trial treatment of my asthma remedy, as quick as the mail can bring it to you.

Send your letter to me, Dr. W. K. Walrath, Box 1384, Adams, New York. Friends, I want to rescue you from those blood-curdling, "mouth-stewed-alive" spasms forever. Will you let me prove I can do it? Send Name and Address To-day; You Can Have it Free and Be Strong and Vigorous

I have in my possession a prescription for nervous debility, lack of vigor, failing memory, lost manhood, insomnia, nervousness, lack of energy, and all weaknesses caused by folly, excesses or indiscretion. I have given this prescription to many of my patients who needed a general rebuilder, and results were simply marvelous. I have thought seriously of putting it up in pill form, but have not done so as yet, preferring to let my patients have the prescription as written by me, so that they can have their own physician fill it. I have no secret patent medicine, but merely a physician's prescription. I have no hesitancy in asking any reader who is weak and discouraged with repeated failures to try this prescription, as I honestly believe it will restore the lost manhood and vitality in any case, no matter how hopeless it may seem. I have decided to distribute a few hundred prescriptions free of charge, in order to get them into homes where they are needed. After my present supply is exhausted I may have to charge $5.00 for it, but for the present I will send one to any reader who will write me for it. Please do not ask me for medical advice, as I do not wish to be placed in the position of prescribing for cases that require personal attention. Simply address your request to Prescription Dept., 1431 Fulton St., Brooklyn, N. Y., and I will send you a prescription in a plain envelope, free of charge. I have no literature to send out, and do not wish to be placed on any mailing list. Kindly do not write me unless you really desire the benefit of this prescription, as I do not wish to have my mail filled with letters from those who are merely curious. I have had this prescription filled at a prominent drug store in Brooklyn, and they have no objection to supplying it to those who call for it. I have no connection with the store, other than that they fill my prescriptions. I will say that the prescription contains no opium, cocaine, nor any habit-forming drug, and is perfectly harmless. Any druggist can fill it. I have had a great many requests for this prescription, and have had it printed in convenient form, and will be glad to send a copy to any reader who will write me for it. Please do not send me any money, as I do not want it, but if you are benefited by it, and feel like doing something for me, you can show your appreciation by telling some friend who is weak and discouraged of the benefit you have received. Please write me to-day, as I will not keep this offer open long. Address me as follows: Prescription Dept., 1431 Fulton St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

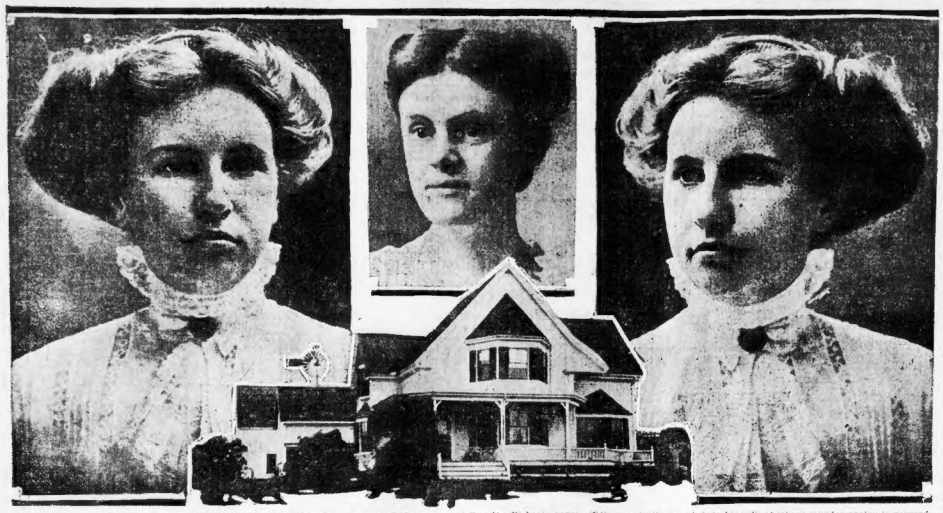
EVENTFUL LIFE OF PASTOR RICHESON, HELD FOR GRIM TRAGEDY



Photograph in upper center, is of Violet Edmunds, Brookline girl who was to have married Rev. Mr. Richeson soon. Other portraits are of Avis Linnell, of whose murder pastor is accused.

ONCE LEAD STREET CAR STRIKERS AND WON FOLLOWERS BY ELOQUENT PLEAS.

In the little village of Rose Hill, Amherst County Courthouse, Virginia, the Rev. Clarence Virgil Thompson Richeson was born thirty-one years ago. He was one of a large family, and was reared in the simple, quiet life of the Virginia plantation, his father, Thompson Virgil Richeson, while not wealthy, was a man of considerable influence and one to whom the country folk went for advice and counsel.

In his early life young Richeson worked about the farm doing chores, as all boys of his neighborhood did, and attended the country school.

His father, who is still living, is a typical Virginia farmer. In early life the boy showed he was too ambitious to remain on the farm. He sought education. He attended the high school at Amherst County Courthouse and is recalled as a bright student.

Ambition to Preach.

In 1895, when he was thirteen years old, he went to Carrollton, Carrollton County, Mo., where he was employed by his cousin, W. J. Richeson. He remained there for three years, attending the academy at that place. He joined the Trotter Baptist Church, Carroll County. It was in this time that he expressed a desire to become a preacher of the gospel.

He remained in Missouri three years, returning to his Virginia home in 1898. He was at home in 1899, when his mother died. This broke up the young pastor's home, as his father married again shortly afterwards, and young Richeson went to William Jewell College, Liberty, Mo., and was graduated in the Baptist ministry at the Third Baptist Church, St. Louis, Mo., after matriculating at the Southern Baptist Seminary in Louisville, Ky.

It was while a senior at the William Jewell College that he was detected cheating in an examination. He was promptly expelled.

One of his courting efforts proved sensational. He was engaged to a young woman of exceptional beauty, whose name him. The young ministerial student called at her home and sought to have himself reinstated in the girl's affections. He pleaded early in the evening and pleaded his case as a lawyer pleading for a life at the bar. He preached as he had never preached before, but the young woman was obdurate. The hours wore on and 2 o'clock in the morning the young man was still pleading. At this point the girl's parents took a hand and notified some of his friends among the students. They came to the house and it required force to get the young man away. He went into a frenzy that was called a fit. The matter was quietly hushed up to prevent the attendant notoriety.

After his expulsion from the college he sought suit against the college for slander, but he dropped it and later confessed that he had been cheating. At this time in his life there was the first symptoms shown of an unusual disposition. In church he was the personification of goodness. His sermons even as a student were unusually fine. He had a young, mellow voice that appealed. He was vigorous and handsome.

At other times, when opposed, he was violent. No one could control him. When turned out of college he grew violent and threatened all kinds of violence to the college authorities. Then he disappeared and was heard no more from at the college until a year ago, when he asked the faculty for grades so that he might enter Rochester Baptist Theological Seminary. The grades were refused.

Another sensational incident of his career in Montana was when a student in college he worked during vacations on the street cars in St. Louis, where, in the famous street-car strike in 1900, he was one of the after-touched orators of the strikers.

Richeson was a member of the Street Railway Union's grievance committee during the great strike. Richeson's influence in this strike was tremendous. His oratory held the striking car men together for weeks when dissensions seemed and it seemed that the strike was lost. He was the member of the grievance committee to go before the railroad officials and urge the men's demands. When the strike was lost he was the first of the union men to lose his job.

He had worked on the Delmar line, and even while on the street cars was a supply pastor at some of the suburban churches. He then went to board at No. 4166 Delmar boulevard, St. Louis. He was a nephew of Thomas Richeson, who was vice-president of the Evans & Howard Face Brick Company, one of the great industries of St. Louis. He was a member of the Grand Avenue Baptist Church in St. Louis.

At this time Richeson was exceedingly popular with young women in the churches in which he supplied during the exercises of pastors, and in church circles in St. Louis.

It was when Richeson returned to college from taking part in the St. Louis car strike that he met Miss Mattey Feltz, who is now dying in Salt Lake City, ignorant of the plight of the young man she aided, and upon whose career she had so important an influence. Miss Feltz, who is a victim of consumption, first met Richeson when she was a teacher in the high school at Liberty.

It was to Miss Feltz that Richeson owed his rapid rise in the ministry, for it was through her that he was enabled to obtain his education. In all she loaned him $700. She is the daughter of a Baptist minister and it was in church work that the couple were first thrown together.

Gave Notes for $700.

Richeson was in deep water when he first met Miss Feltz. He did not have funds to continue his college course and feared he would have to go into trade and give up a professional career. He told his troubles to the minister's daughter and she, knowing of the troubles of her father's early career, and being easily won by the excellent deeds of the handsome young student, readily became his benefactor.

She offered the money for him to complete his college course. The offer was accepted, and Richeson became a debtor of the spinster school teacher to the amount of $700, for which he gave notes.

After completing his course at the Newton Theological Seminary and assuming a pastorate the young preacher began to pay off the notes.

Miss Feltz still holds his final note, on which the principal has been paid, the interest alone remaining due.

The Feltz family comes from old Kentucky stock and was prominent in affairs of the Southland in ante-bellum days.

It was a young man of striking physique, tall and manly in appearance, with all the refinement centered in the Southern gentleman and the affability of the Westerner, that presented himself at the Newton Theological Seminary in 1906. His features were dark and regular. His hair black and plentiful. His eyes bright and flashing. He was eloquent.

He was conceited, as many a handsome man is, but even his fellow-students did not hold this up against him. They said he was justified in his pride of self.

Such was the young Virginian who presented himself at the Newton Theological School in 1906, and there opens the first chapter of the terrible tragedy that now marks his career.

While a student he was introduced, at a social gathering, to Miss Violet Edmunds, the daughter of H. Girard Edmunds, a trustee of the seminary.

When Clarence Richeson had been at the Newton school two years, Fate stepped across his path and summoned him to Hyannis, the South Shore town which boasts of being the "Paradise of the Massachusetts Coast."

In Hyannis lived Miss Avis Linnell.

This was not the attraction of the young theological student at this time. He was looking for a pastorate as his funds were short and he wished to secure money to complete his course. He became a candidate for the pastorate of the Baptist Church in Hyannis.

The appearance of the handsome young pastor in the pulpit created a sensation among the younger members of the church.

At his first appearance in Hyannis as the young preacher stood in his pulpit he must have noted the handsome girl singer in the choir. She was Miss Avis Linnell. Miss Linnell was religious and she had a beautiful full soprano voice.

So far as Fate goes, Avis Linnell hadn't the slightest chance in the world of escaping the attention of the young minister. He admired beauty. He was young and vigorous and had seen considerable of the world. The childish innocence of the handsome singer attracted him above all others of the town young girls. He did not hesitate in expressing his admiration.

He met Avis Linnell at the marriage reception of her sister, Mrs. William McLean, who now resides in Brockton. The young pastor was quite in his element. He said, pointing to the bride's handsome, pretty sister: "I would like to win her."

"Why don't you," was the response.

They were introduced and from that time, in November, 1908, the young pastor was the almost constant attendant of the young music student.

The salary of the young pastor in Hyannis was $800 a year. He was ambitious. He completed his course at the Newton Theological School in 1909, but he added a post-graduate course.

Was Liyal to Pastor.

In Hyannis he was the most popular preacher the town has ever had. When it became known that he was engaged to Miss Avis Linnell there was a general rejoicing that the young pastor had chosen a Hyannis girl as his sweetheart and wife-to-be. Then followed a year which must have been the happiest in the life of Miss Avis Linnell. She was but seventeen years old and a pupil of the Hyannis Normal School, when she met young Richeson. He praised her voice and advised her to go to the New England Conservatory of Music to complete a musical education.

Then in April, 1910, came his resignation as pastor of the Hyannis Baptist Church and his acceptance of the pastorate of the Immanuel Baptist Church of Cambridge. Here he was to receive $2,000 a year salary. It seemed the most natural thing in the world that when he came to Cambridge Miss Linnell should at once begin her musical studies. She resided at the Young Women's Christian Association and "her friend," as the girls of his house came to know him, was the handsome young pastor of the Cambridge Church. They frequently went out to dinner together and Miss Linnell had no other gentleman friend. She was true to the young pastor.

Strange Contrasts in Life.

In the meantime he had resumed his acquaintance with Miss Edmunds, the wealthy Brookline girl, and last Summer went to the magnificent Edmunds estate in Dublin, N. H., where he spent his vacation at the home of the Brookline heiress.

Then came the recent publication of his engagement to Miss Violet Edmunds and the horrible tragedy that cost the life of Miss Avis Linnell.

Student of character find much to ponder over in the career of the Rev. Mr. Richeson. They see strange contrasts in his actions at various times in his life. He was consumed with ambition. He saw in his courtship of Miss Edmunds all that he lacks in life. He saw the highest of social position, wealth of which the poor struggling student must have felt the need, and which had so often loomed up as a barrier to the future of the young student in his struggle for an education. With physical beauty, education, wealth and social position, what was missing to complete the most far-reaching ambitions he might have had? But he was engaged to Miss Avis Linnell, she was appealing to him for aid. Then came the tragedy.

PLAN CLUBS FOR FORMER PUPILS

A start in extending the use of public school buildings for the benefit of present or former pupils who are compelled to leave school early in life will be made by the Women's Municipal League in the East B. Jon High School next Thursday evening.

The Committee on the Extended Use of School Buildings of the League has spent years in studying the subject and its members believe they have devised a plan that will aid the young people and also further other public buildings in a manner that will result in general public benefit.

Will Form Club.

It is planned to have the young people of both sexes in every school district organize themselves in small clubs. On next Thursday evening the young women of the East Boston High School district are invited to meet in the school gymnasium, where they will have their choice of joining a literary club, a home making class, a novelty sewing class, a game club or a dramatic club.

At a later hour the young men of the district are invited to the school hall to join either a junior city council, a clay modeling class, a printing class, a debating club, a public speaking class or a dramatic club. Free instruction will be given each club and class.

The following night, Friday, October 27, he made right for young men and gymnasium night for young women. Those who care for neither may join either a band, a drum corps, a glee club or an orchestra.

Parents at Meetings.

The young men will meet in the gymnasium on Friday night for folk dancing, apparatus work and practice basketball. The third opening night, Saturday, October 28, will be made right for young women and gymnasium night for young men.

After these preliminary meetings each club or class or council will meet once each week. A definite hour and night and place will be arranged for each club. Saturday will be reserved for a meeting of all the club members, their parents and friends. At this meeting a free entertainment, play, lecture or musical will be given.

PAPER LAUDS HEARST'S STAND

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—The leading editorial in the Washington Post today, commenting on the declaration of William Randolph Hearst, that Murphy and Murphyism should be defeated in New York, is as follows:

The people of the United States did not require the personal statement of William Randolph Hearst that he is a Democrat to assure themselves as to his political convictions.

He inherited Democracy from an honored father, who remained faithful and loyal to his party during the darkest days and years of the Democracy, true to its faith and its candidates, and whose memory to-day is an inspiration to Democrats in every section of the country.

His last legacy to his party and his country was his son, who has ever followed the tenets of the founders of the party and, by the bold utterances in defense of the rights of the masses of the people, has ever proclaimed the principles of Jefferson, whether interesting the enmity of friend or foe thereby.

"Has Bettered Public."

His work in the cause of good citizenship and pure government is known throughout the area of the Republic and he has demanded in his own party the same spirit of civic righteousness, the same steadfast devotion to the interests of the citizens that he has called upon his opponents to practice. The public of the United States has been bettered through the persistent efforts of William Randolph Hearst.

He has fought the battles of the classes of the people bravely and nobly, often at great cost to himself of time, money and friends.

He has repeatedly shown that the success of the principles he believed in, and the measures he proposed, were above and beyond personal ambitions or selfish aims.

Brilliant in thought, resourceful in conception, energetic in action, his ability is recognized by the leaders in finance, in public affairs and intellectual circles throughout the world. Sincerity of profession and his faithfulness to declared purpose gives him enduring and impregnable strength with the people at large.

"Adds Mighty Factor."

His announcement at New York adds a mighty factor to the aggressive power of Democracy in the ensuing campaign, for it inspires the recognition of a political force whose influence extends far beyond mere partisan lines.

Not only in New York, but throughout the Union, Mr. Hearst has the confidence of an independent and progressive electorate that stands for the highest ideals in public life and bows to follow the standard of a champion so tireless in his efforts to attain them.

This declaration of Mr. Hearst will be hailed with delight by his thousands of friends and admirers in every State.

SUBMARINE MAKES 144-FOOT RECORD

NEWPORT, R. I., Oct. 21.—All records for submergence by submarine boats of the United States navy with crew on board were broken today by the Salmon. The craft, with nineteen sailors and two officers on board, descended in Narragansett Bay to a depth of 144 feet, remaining there for fifteen minutes. The best previous record was 125 feet.

TOWN CHEERED BY GIRL BABY

MIDDLETOWN, Ct., Oct. 21.—There is great rejoicing in the town of Sterling to-day. A girl baby has arrived. There has been a strange dearth of girls in the town. The district school has more than a score of pupils but there is only one girl among them all, the others being boys. When a new family has moved to town it has so happened that the children have been boys. The strange spell seems to have been broken now for the Baptist Church recently called a minister, the Rev. E. H. Anderson. When it was discovered that he was the father of four sturdy boys none of his parishioners felt they had made a mistake in not calling a man who had some girls.

Mrs. Anderson has just given birth to a girl, however, the first the stork has left in town for many months.

BOY LEADS CARDINAL TO GRAVE OF FRIEND

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 21.—Hand in hand with an eight-year-old boy Cardinal Gibbons walked the mile from Sacred Heart Cathedral to Mount Calvary Cemetery, where Bishop Van De Vyver was buried. The elderly cardinal had stepped aside after conducting the high requiem mass in the Cathedral and in a side room had removed his vestments and donned a frock coat and silk hat. He was entreated to take the carriage awaiting him, but he only smiled. "My heart is heavy," he said, "and I need the air. This child will lead me."

FOLKS PAST FIFTY MUST USE CASCARETS

What Glasses Are to Weak Eyes, Cascarets Are to Weak Bowels. A 10-Cent Box Will Truly Amaze You

Most old people must give to the bowels some regular help, else they suffer from constipation. The condition is perfectly natural. It is just as natural as it is for old people to walk slowly. For age is never so active as youth. The muscles are less elastic. And the bowels are muscles.

So all old people need Cascarets. One might as well refuse to aid weak eyes with glasses as to neglect this gentle aid to weak bowels. The bowels must be kept active. This is important at all ages, but never so much as at fifty.

Age is not a time for harsh physics. Youth may occasionally whip the bowels into activity. But a lash can't be used every day. What the bowels of the old need is a gentle and natural tonic. One that can be constantly used without harm. The only such tonic is Cascarets and they cost only 10 cents per box at any drug store. They work while you sleep.

WHEN MR. FOSS says that European shoe manufacturers get the machines of the United Shoe Machinery Company on better terms than American manufacturers can get them, he says what is not true. The average royalty per pair of shoes of the same quality has never been lower in Europe than in the United States. There is no appreciable difference between the leases which European and American manufacturers sign; yet the United Shoe Machinery Company pursuing abroad the same business methods as at home, has done a greatly increasing business in open competition with the so-called free machinery which its critics here profess to favor. European manufacturers are constantly replacing their free machinery with machinery obtained from the United Shoe Machinery Company under lease conditions, because, like American manufacturers, they know they can thus get better machines, better service and better terms than in any other way.

At the New England Fair in the Mechanics Building is a complete shoemaking plant, with sixty machines of the Company in actual operation making women's high grade Goodyear Welt Shoes.

Visit the Fair and learn for yourself the terms upon which the shoe manufacturer enjoys the use of each machine.

By TED PARKE.

Harvard and Amherst meet on the gridiron in the Stadium this afternoon at 3 o'clock, but from all appearances, the Purple and White team will not go into Crimson goodness such score as s.hs passed out to the latter team last year, and despite the somewhat crippled condition of the team, Harvard looks forward to a victory much easier than that over Williams last Saturday.

Harvard is slated to play this afternoon minus the services of Captain Fisher at right guard. The big Crimson leader is staying out of the game to-day, to give his knee, which was injured in the Williams game last week, ample opportunity to heal before the first hard struggle of the year, that with Brown next Saturday. Captain Fisher's injury is not at all serious, but an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure and Fisher will favor the ounce. Keays, who was recently displaced at left guard by Leslie, will fill the captain's position, while Jenckes, who is now playing left tackle, will be in that berth again.

Bettle Will Have a Chance.

The rest of the line will remain the same. Storer still hanging onto centre, despite the fact that his passing was bad last Saturday and almost resulted in blocked punts. The backfield, however, is much altered from the order which it was predicted would prevail when the Harvard squad reported. Reynolds, a sophomore who came out late for the football practice, has made good with a vengeance and his brilliant running and plunging have thus far won him a place in the backfield.

Wendell will, of course, again be at right half, but Bettle, who has been playing among the subs, will be at left half in the lineup given out this week. He is filled upon. Hinckell has been holding the sub in place of Morrison, but some fine test. Morrison was an excellent defensive player last year and is a fair plunger.

This year, however, he has retrogressed somewhat and Hinckell is now a better than Morrison, and had the place for a couple of games, again as a line plunger and also an excellent defensive man, and these two qualities combined may still win him a position on the regular backfield list.

Last year Harvard got the scare of its life at the hands of Amherst when early in the game, Roberts the captain of the visiting team, broke away for a long run, covering ran to Harvard's three-yard line. The Amherst line at that time was not strong at the pivotal position with Pinkham, a colored chap, who played a wonderful game, but who has graduated. His work at centre made possible many brilliant plays by Amherst last year.

Amherst Line of Veterans.

While Amherst's line is composed in a great degree of veterans from last year, developed slowly this year and was but one of the three games played, taking the first game from Springfield Training School 3 to 0, tieing with Wesleyan 3 to 3, scoring one game and losing Trinity 18 to 0. With such a poor record preceding her, followers of Amherst are not looking forward to a game of struggle for Harvard will go into the game with the element which has been apparent in the Crimson attack, a lightning fast backfield. Harvard has not come up to expectations so far this season, but however, so that when one comes right down to tacks, a very fast backfield is what can be spoken of in any certain tones.

Amherst's only chance of scoring unless some fluke affords an opportunity, is by Captain Maddern's ability to place not get a chance last year to do any work in this line, but he is a well known drop kicker within the thirty-five yard line, and should the Purple and White get the ball within this distance of the Harvard goal, the Crimson forwards will have to look lively to block off the attempt.

The officials will give much satisfaction in the Harvard-Yale game at New Haven last Fall have been reappointed to officiate at this contest this year. Their names were made public by the Harvard football management last night. They are—Referee, W. S. Langford of Tufts; umpire, D. L. Fults of Brown; field judge, W. Morice of Pennsylvania; head linesman, J. R. Pendleton, of Bowdoin. These for the Pennsylvania game differ only in the umpire and field judge, they being as follows:

Umpire, C. S. Williams of Pennsylvania, instead of Fultz; and field judge, A. C. L. Sharpe of Yale instead of Morice.

Princeton Plays Navy.

PRINCETON, Oct. 21.—The Tiger eleven went through a short snappy signal drill early this morning in final preparation for the struggle with the Navy today at Annapolis. The team went down from the field house in cabs and left for Baltimore after the practice. Three coaches, Trainer Fitzpatrick and twenty-two players made up the party. Eight more substitutes will join the squad at Baltimore. The Princeton band, which accompanied the team on the cruise to Annapolis, was given a send off by a rousing procession in the Navy, especially since the Tiger band is considered by many to be the best banda of the Tiger eleven will be strengthened by the return to the line-up of Captain Hoy, who is essential to play right tackle on the first team on account of his weight and strength. To the Tiger scouts, especially in defense. The only other change in the Princeton line-up will attend a first team in the game. The probable Princeton line-up is as follows: Left end, Wilson; left tackle, Hoy; left guard, Brown of Mercersburg; centre, Kafer; right guard, McLean; right tackle, Hillebrand; right end, Bennett; quarterback, Dewitt; left half, Davis; right half, Dewitt; full back, Pendleton, G. S.

Cornell Shows Ginger.

ITHACA, Oct. 21.—Cornell showed more ginger in its signal drill yesterday in preparation for the Washington and Jefferson game, than at any time this season. The coaches looked for a win by a good margin, although the Cornell scrubs is expected to put up a fight. Both Hall and Kilmon, the ex-guard, will probably play in the game at quarter. The regulars will enter the game with Hall at quarter, Kilmon at left end and Right End Ginger Munn in his old berth at right end. Should Hall not be able to play Kilmon, the ex-guard, will probably play in that position. Munn, who has been playing at left end, will then go to right end. Should Kilmon not be in condition for the game, Munn will probably be shifted to left end. Cornell is confident of winning the game by a good margin.

Colby Feels Confident.

WATERVILLE, Oct. 21.—Yesterday's practice was the last for Coby before the game here on Saturday and consequently was light. It consisted entirely of running down punts and catching signals. The team is confident and are in good shape. Every one is out and looking forward eagerly to the game. The promises to be a close battle as Bates is as strong as ever. The lineup: Colby—Le., Bowdoin; Lt., Rand; Lg., Keegel; C., C. Soule; Rg., Hanley; Rt., Hamilton; Re., Hall; Qb., Dow; Lh., Bates; Rh., Taylor; Fb., Bowdoin.

Bowdoin Has No Game.

BRUNSWICK, Me., Oct. 21.—The game which was scheduled for this afternoon between Bowdoin and Norwich University has been cancelled by the Norwich managers, and Coach Sanborn has been notified that the game will not be played. This leaves the Bowdoin football squad entirely without a game for getting another game. As a result Bowdoin will play the only Maine college on its schedule, and it is considered by the coaches to be hazardous only series, but many feel that the team would be better off without the game. The Bowdoin game was lack of finances, although the Bowdoin management has made several desperate guarantee to the Norwich management.

Holy Cross to Play Aggies.

WORCESTER, Oct. 21.—Holy Cross will play its second home game of the season on Fitton Field this afternoon, having as their opponents the Rhode Massachusetts Aggies. The latter team, they will, in all probability, defeat in an easy game. The local aggregation will be a little stronger and faster than the visitors. Coach Larkin has been drilling his men hard this week in order to more thoroughly try them out for the big game with Fordham next week. The following men are expected to start: Left end, Cassidy; left tackle, Meade; left guard, Dwyer; centre, Ryan; right guard, Kavanagh; right tackle, Braun; right end, Malcolm; Mahar, Nadeau, Gault, backs. The teams will probably play twelve-minute quarters.

Navy Has Full Strength.

ANNAPOLIS, Oct. 21.—The Midshipmen will be able to get their best team against Princeton this afternoon, but no undue chances will be taken by the coaches or players. Andover the first signs of auditions to date that will be using every effort to win the game. Both Captain Dalton and Brown, who have been out of the game for several weeks, will start the game. The former will play at left end, and the latter will be at right end. With the exception of Littlejohn, the plant will be the same team that defeated Lehigh on Friday. The Army coaches feel confident that the Navy eleven will be held down to a low score.

MIDDLETOWN, Oct. 21.—For the first time in several years, Tufts and Wesleyan will clash on the gridiron to-day on Wesleyan Field. Wesleyan has the best eleven that has been turned out at the institution for many years and they expect to win the game by a good sized score.

Wesleyan will miss the services of Captain Mitchell, who has retired from the game for the season because the scholastic Coach Yorbis has placed Murphy in his place and he has done considerable good work at centre. Bacon, the star quarter, who has been out of the game for several weeks, will start the game.

The Tufts team also comes to the field with every first string man except Mitchell, the centre rush, in the best shape and prepared to put up a game fight. Mitchell is now playing at left end with a torn ligament in his shoulder and he will probably be used in only part of the game.

Coach Tobin has been giving the men hard during the past week in preparation for this game and believes that his team stands a good chance of winning. Both teams are about evenly matched in weight.

MISS CAMPBELL WINS GOLF CUP MATCH

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 21.—Miss Dorothy Campbell of the Hamilton Golf Club, Ontario, and woman champion of Great Britain and Canada, won possession of the Berbolzheimer cup by defeating Mrs. Caleb Fox of the Home Club, 3 up and 2 to play, in the final round of the invitation golf tournament at the Huntingdon Valley Country Club. Although Mrs. Fox outdrove her opponent at nearly every tee, Miss Campbell more than overcame that advantage by her excellent approach shots and her superior putting.

CAMBRIDGE LATIN WINS CITY TITLE

Kimbers drop kick from the twenty-two-yard line in the last four minutes of play enabled Cambridge Latin to defeat Rindge Technical School, 6 to 5, in an exciting game on Tufts Athletic Field yesterday afternoon. The victory carried with it the school championship of Cambridge, and it was the first win in the annual game series entered by the Latin School players since 1906. Cambridge Latin made its touchdown in the opening period, Rindge tying it up with a touchdown in the third, and Kimbers' goal bringing the deciding points in the final session.

HARVARD FRESHMEN HOLD TRACK MEET

The Harvard freshman track candidates held their Fall scratch meet in the stadium yesterday. Tower, formerly of Exeter, and Carter, who won both mile and two-mile easily, were the individual stars of the meet. No remarkable marks were made in any of the events.

WEST POINT, Oct. 21.—Everything will point to a close game between the Army and Yale this afternoon. Both teams are in the best of condition. Although Captain Howze has been laid up with a cold several days in the past week, Head Coach Field said that he would start the game. Many believe that the game will be won by the team making the first touchdown, as a field goal from placement is not looked for. Yale has its sturdy little captain to rely upon to kick the ball between the goal posts, while the Army has two star drop kickers in Dean and Keyes.

Lee remained in the North last night and came up the Hudson this morning. Erskine and Lewis of the Yale coaching staff got their first real tryout in a scrimmage this afternoon. Both men have played end and season and was shifted to tackle on the Yale team, but will play at this position. The Army will have every first string man in the game with the exception of Littlejohn, the plant will be the same team that defeated Lehigh on Friday. The Army coaches feel confident that the Yale eleven will be held down to a low score.

LEARY TO COACH THE LEXINGTON ELEVEN

LEXINGTON, Oct. 21.—During the rest of the football season the Lexington High school football eleven will be coached by John L. Leary of Waltham. Leary was formerly the star player on the Waltham High eleven for four years. He was picked for the all-interscholastic eleven three years in succession. He also played on the Tufts college team.

It is expected that the remaining games will be under the direction of Leary, who is now playing at left end with a torn ligament in his shoulder so he will probably be used in only part of the game.

Coach Tobin has been giving the men hard during the past week in preparation for this game and believes that his team stands a good chance of winning. Both teams are about evenly matched in weight.

JENNINGS TRADE IS DENIED BY M'GRAW

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 21.—McGraw will not discuss the letter he has received from the National Commission warning him to cease his remarks on the ball field, but says that he considered the fine of Merkle an outrage. Mr. Johnson said that Jennings is under contract to the Detroit Club, and that the club has not released him.

HANOVER, Oct. 21.—Dartmouth and Williams clash on Alumni Oval this afternoon for the twenty-fourth time, and Dartmouth feels confident that they will send the fighter Williams eleven down to defeat. Williams come to Hanover filled with hope, as they will have every first string man in the game, while the Green will have to do so with a few of the field with many substitutes in the lineup.

Captain Hall (the Hogsel), the star halfback and drop kicker of the Green, has badly bruised his ankle, and consequently he has been forced to make shifts in his back field during the past week.

The Williams team spent the night at White River Junction and came direct over for the game to-day. The entire team has been playing a fast preliminary game with Harvard game, and Coach Linder feels confident that his team will make a good showing. Captain Cavanaugh will start Broom in the game at quarter, while Bailey will be at left end, the others with his first string men before the Princeton and Harvard games.

DILLON AND HOUCK TO MEET AT ARMORY

Jack Dillon of Indianapolis and Leo Houck of Pittsburg, two of the contenders for the middleweight title, have been matched to box in the feature bout at the Armory A. A. next Tuesday night. Both have boxed in Boston before and made a good impression. The semi-final bout will be between Mark Conley, a classy lightweight of South Boston, and Freddy Kelly, also a speedy member of the lightweights in the Quarter City. The opening preliminary will be between Joe Coffey of Boston and John Lynch of Providence. The other bout will introduce Eddie Kelly of Cambridge and Pat Recco of Lawrence.

Hobbs Tells How the End Positions Should Be Played

By HENRY H. HOBBS.

Copyright, 1911, Boston American. All Rights Reserved.

In the previous articles the qualifications and the different styles of play of the tackle and centre positions have been quite fully discussed. Taking let us consider the defensive duties of the end.

The position of end is one of the most enjoyable positions on the whole team to play. The pleasure for this are that there are so many variations in its play that it is not a dead inch as playing in the centre or guard positions.

With the new rules more plays and variations are seen at the end, including forward passes and onside kicks, than at any of the other positions. With the old rules five yards was a necessary distance to gain in three downs, now the distance to be gained has been doubled.

Giants Ends Have the Call.

It is quite true that the line defence in order to meet the new style of play has been somewhat weakened. Nevertheless with two teams fairly evenly matched it is a decidedly hard proposition to consistently gain this amount of ground by line plunging.

As a result more open play has been developed, and this means that a greater number of plays are sent at the end.

It seems to be the general opinion among men who are authorities on football that large ends on the college teams assigning somewhere in the vicinity of 185 pounds, are much more desirable than the ends who weigh on an average of about 170 pounds, as they are more used more especially under the old rules.

This decision has resulted for the simple reason that the end, being large and active, can play on the defence very close to the tackle, on even two yards away.

In this position he is able to advance quickly into the opponents' territory, going straight ahead, about two yards, and meeting the play from the outside at this point.

The tackle, if he has been successful, will meet the play at about the same time as the end and together they will make a formidable defence at this very spot.

The end, as I have previously said, being at the outside, turns the play in at this point, and his duty, primarily, is to smash the interference, leaving the end ample room to tackle the man with the ball. I recall how magnificently the only poor ol' Tom Shevlin, the greatest end that ever trod the gridiron, worked his defence in this respect, and that man was a star at it. All-American end for two of the past two years.

Yet the more method of defence, if conscientiously carried through, will most certainly cause great trouble to the attacking team, and should the tackle not be successful in doing his part, thoroughly we have a large, powerful end resembling the right in his physique to meet the interference from the outside, shattering it and tarrying the runner.

Kilpatrick's End Play.

This leaves a secondary defensive man, the quarterback, in position to advance quickly and meet the runner free from interference. It should then be a very simple task for the play who hardly ever gains.

TECH TEAM TO HOLD BIG MEET

Tech's athletic season starts this afternoon at the Tech field in Brookline, with the annual Fall Inter-class Track meet. There are nearly seventy-five entries, including a large number of new men. Captain Dalrymple hopes to develop some of the freshmen into varsity athletes. The class which carries off the honors at this first meet has an excellent chance to lead in athletic supremacy for the year. In the decision of which the indoor meet and the two class meets in the Spring are also scored. The present senior class had the lead last year, but it has lost many of its best men and will probably have to take second place now.

Each class looked for its dashmen, but the field seems to promise nothing exciting. L. G. Metcalf, '12, being the only man to run close already built.

Coach Kanaly has a fast bunch of sophomore hurdlers, including Ames, '14, who won the 100 and 220-yard dashes at last year's meet with Brown, and who should take the hundred. Francis Hann, the freshman, has also shown promise.

The furlong dash and the middle distance runs are left for some of the winners of last year's meets. R. T. Thompson, '13, J. J. Strachan, '13, T. H. Gaeth, '12, and F. J. Shepard, '12, C. Mark, A. Oettinger, the diminutive sprinter of the team in 1910, has returned after a year's leave of absence.

The county aggregation has been entered in the mile and two-mile runs and is booked strongly for all the places. Captain H. G. Watkins, who did such remarkable work in these distances last year, has left the institute, so that S. C. Shield, '14, B. Bonney, '14, A. F. Sys, '13, and E. B. Germain, '13, will fight for the initial position.

Captain P. W. Dalrymple, '12, is first choice for the high jump, while Harold Greenleaf, '12, will have little difficulty in the broad.

ANDOVER TO HOLD CROSS-COUNTRY RACE

ANDOVER, Oct. 21.—Phillips Academy is to hold an invitation cross-country run over the Andover course on Saturday, October 24. Invitations have already been sent out to Harvard, Yale, Cornell, Dartmouth and M. I. T. freshmen, and though all have not accepted it is expected that they will. The course is about four miles in length, the runners starting from the gymnasium, and ending on the athletic fields. Brothers' Field and six around woods in Brothers' Field and six around twice more. Andover has only two of her last year's team back this year, Ladd and Phill, but there is some promising material among the newcomers.

Billy Papke Must Hustle to Make Good His Word

By JACK CONWAY.

Several weeks ago Billy Papke announced that he was going to start a campaign which would prove that he is the rightful middleweight champion. And more than a baker's dozen of fight fans took Billy's statement in good faith, but, up to date, he has not yet started training, without mentioning fighting.

If the Illinois mixer doesn't get a move on and do some real fighting against some of the "live wires" in his class he will have to relinquish any claim he may have on the middleweight title.

Just now Papke is in the "in bad" class throughout the country and cannot afford to take things easy. His miserable showing against Sailor Burke in New York is still fresh in the minds of the followers of fistiana.

Papke loses his claim to middleweight champion on his victory over Stanley Ketchel in 1908. Ketchell afterwards knocked Papke out and also won a decision in a twenty-round bout.

He's an In-and-Outer.

At best, Papke is only an "in-and-outer." One day he fights like a regular champion, while a week later he boxes like a novice.

When Papke went to Australia, he lost to Dave Smith, who is nothing more than a poor second-rater. Papke then came back strong and defeated Smith in easy fashion. This seems to indicate that the Illinois man falls to do himself justice when he is pitted against a boxer without a big reputation.

When Papke fought Sailor Burke in New York, he was in wretched condition. He was overweight and slow on his feet. And as a result, the awkward Burke easily held his own.

There are several middleweights around loose who appear capable of giving Papke a great battle even though he be in the best of condition of his life. Among this number are Frank Klaus of Pittsburg and our old friend Bob Moha of Milwaukee. Either of these men would have experienced little difficulty in defeating the "Illinois Thunderbolt" the night that he met Burke.

Klaus's manager has issued several challenges to Papke, but they all have been of no avail. Promoters out on the coast were willing to match Klaus and Papke but the latter wouldn't give his consent to the match.

The officials of the Armory A. A. offered Papke an opportunity to box in this city against Klaus or some other leading middleweight, but he turned the offer down.

Outclasses All Others.

Klaus is one of the best middleweights in the country and appears to outclass all of the other contenders for the high honor with the exception of Bob Moha. Klaus and Moha were scheduled to meet in this city a week ago last Tuesday but the bout was called off owing to the fact that the Milwaukee "crave dweller" injured one of his hands while training for the scrap.

There have been reports that Moha and Klaus have been matched to meet at the Tremont street rink some time in the near future but they are groundless. Bob's hand is still in pretty bad shape and it is said that he will not have use of the injured member for some time to come.

Leo Houck, Jimmy Clabby, Jack Dillon and Clyborne Johnny Thompson also put in claims to the middleweight title but they are not taken serious by fight fans.

Jack Geyer, the Denver heavyweight who has come East looking for easy money, appears to lack the stuff that takes champions.

Walter Coffey, the California welterweight, blew into Geyer's training quarters the other day. Coffey asked the Denver giant whether he had any objections to working out with him and the latter replied that he hadn't any. Coffey then stripped for action and started in to box with Geyer.

After the men had been boxing for a few minutes Geyer slipped Coffey a punch of a blow on the nose. This aroused Coffey's fighting spirit and he landed right in and inside of four rounds had Geyer torn to ribbons. And the funny part of the entire affair is that Coffey still has an impression that he is some fighter.

Joe Walcott is training. What do you think of it? I don't know what system the giant killer is following, but he is getting into condition and that's enough to satisfy me.

Joe looks upon his victory over "Cheese" Lee as a stepping stone to greater honors. Walcott is now 27 years old and needs a little cash. But at that, Joe is better than some of the "prelim" boys who are pulling down the kale.

YALE FRESHMEN LOSE FIVE REGULAR MEN

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 21.—The Yale freshmen football eleven found themselves crippled to-day in playing their first important match of the year. They are to meet Exeter Academy and five of their regular players were barred from the game because of the recently edict in the Sheffield Scientific School cutting off members of class departments from all activities. Don Markle, the star of the team, is lost by this decree. Exeter has not played Yale for several years and came here anticipating a chance of taking away an Eli class scalp.

Waltham and Somerville will clash at the gridiron this afternoon at Somerville in their annual rushing battle. This is one of the biggest schoolboy attractions of the season and a great crowd will turn out.

The followers of the Red and Blue team place them as the favorites, but the followers of the Watch City team are not thinking of defeat. The game should be well played, as both teams have been hard at work and are well advanced in the game.

Coach Harry Dane has done some good work with the Waltham team this season and he has developed a much stronger team than it was expected at the beginning of the season. The team got an early start and it has played six games to date, and the playing ability of every man is fully known by the captain and coach, and they place their men accordingly.

The Waltham team is lighter than the eleven that have been turned out at the school in the past years, but all have proved worthy. The line has held great shape and the backfield has been strong and fast and have bucked all lines for gains.

The Somerville backfield is the hope of the Red and Blue supporters. Garland, Leyland and Doane are expected to penetrate the Waltham line for gains that will enable them to push the pigskin over for touchdowns. The rushing ability of the three backs is well known to the Waltham players and they will do everything in their power to stop the onrush.

New World's Series Row Stirs Up Baseball Fans

By J. M. McCONAUGHY.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 21.—Another row has cropped up in the world's series, already overburdened with arguments and unpleasantries.

The players of both teams believe that they should receive a share of this money, while the National Commission contends that they are not entitled to any part of it.

The matter was brought to the attention of the players when the commission notified the managers of the teams to permit the moving pictures men to take whatever scenes they desired before the games while the teams are practicing. It was stated that the contract between the commission and the picture firm stipulated that the men must pose for the pictures.

Players Want Share.

Manager McGraw tried unsuccessfully to get some definite information on the subject from the commission. It is probable that the clubs and Athletics will get together before the next game is played and place their demands before the commission. The players of the teams are of the opinion mandated that McGraw be disciplined.

By R. W. LARDNER.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 21.—The weather bureau again at 10 o'clock and again at before 9 o'clock the Athletics-Giants game scheduled for the world's Series was off. This is the second time that the fourth game between the two champion league teams has had to be postponed. The game will take place at Philadelphia on Monday providing the weather elements will permit.

Rain fell heavily during the early morning hours and conditions were such that it was unofficially announced early after an inspection showed that Shibe Park was a veritable swamp. The grounds were asked deep with mud and water, and there were no signs of a letup in the rain's steady downpour.

Following the instructions issued by the National Commission before it left for New York last night, the members of the umpiring staff were sent to Shibe Park between 9 and 9 o'clock and viewed the field. They couldn't see a chance to play to-day, and frankly said so.

Fans Losing interest.

The idleness has begun to pall upon the patience of baseball fans. All of the players are thoroughly rested, and the danger now looming up is that too much rest may have a bad effect on the players.

Their interest drifted by successive days of idleness, and the Monday fair sent many of the fans.

Manager McGraw planned this morning to allow his team to desert Quakertown for the day, returning from New York on Monday.

"This is-day was certainly a hard blow" said connie Mack, manager of the Athletics "Both teams were having a good business in Philadelphia, and pleasant weather today would have brought out a record crowd.

"The members of the Athletics are in fine condition for the fourth game, and they feel no fear as to the outcome. The pitching staff has now got down to a real pitching staff."

The same conditions apply to the Giants. McGraw to-day had Mathewson, Marquard and Ames at his disposal to pick from to take the mound in the next game.

With the pitching staffs betting halfand a standstill, although the Athletics have a bit favorable for the outcome of the series.

JENNINGS MAY BE CALLED BEFORE THE AMERICAN LEAGUE

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 21.—Before Hugney Jennings again takes up his duties with the Detroit Tigers he is likely to be brought before the American League to answer the charges of treachery made by Captain Harry Davis and Manager Connie Mack of the Athletics.

These charges are that Jennings went to Manager McGraw of the Giants and told the New Yorker to "go after" Frank Baker in the series.

A prominent American League said this afternoon that when informed of the Athletics' alleged action several days ago Jennings denied the charges began President Johnson was informed that Hughey had suggested to McGraw that the Giants go after Baker.

Jennings declines to discuss Davis's charges, but said that the charges were too flimsy to need considering.

It is known, though, that certain American League officials, in addition to President Johnson, have been watching the closely-contested series closely and have noted the way Jennings' pitchers have been working. They have also noted the advice Jennings is said to send his players after the Athletics third base.

The men who have been close to Jennings alleged act are said to be much incensed at the Detroit leader. There is little doubt that the charges against Jennings will be fully investigated after the World's Series is over and that some of the Tigers players will be called upon to testify against their leader.

President Johnson says that he was not surprised that Shoeless Joe Jackson intended to injure Baker when he jumped at Frank Isbell, Chicago White Sox player, in 1910. He said Mr. Johnson: "Baker was not block-

WAGNER MAY GO TO CINCINNATI

CINCINNATI, Oct. 21.—Reports received here from Philadelphia, where President Garry Herrmann of the Reds is awaiting the next game of the World's Series, were to the effect that the next manager of the Cincinnati Reds will be from Boston.

The rip grew strong around baseball headquarters during the afternoon that the manager and shortstop of the Reds for 1912 would be Charlie Wagner of the Boston Americans. The Stovall-McBride deal was decided, but on top of that comes another that McBride goes to Boston and Wagner to Cincinnati.

The Reds made a good offer for Wagner last summer, but John I. Taylor could not get him past his American League fairies. Now, so the rumor goes, Wagner will be transferred. Mr. Herrmann, of course, says he has none to be obdurate.

HAL CHASE SAYS ATTEMPT TO SPIKE BAKER WAS MEANT

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 21.—In a statement to-day, Hal Chase, the first baseman of the New York American league manager and dashing baseman, denies his accusation that the spiking of Stuffy McInnis in last Tuesday's game was "a deliberate attempt to injure Baker so that he could not take part in any more of the games." "Baker might have been the like," Chase says, "only that is no excuse for a player to jump feet first, spiked high, as the Giant's every outfielder did at Baker in the 11th inning of Tuesday's game at the Polo grounds.

BAN JOHNSON SAYS RED SOX WILL HAVE A NEW INFIELDER

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 21.—Possibly some color was lent to the story that Jake Stahl Wagner will go to Cincinnati next season by the announcement of President Johnson of the American League to-day that Hooper will have several new infielders next season. He would not say that George Stovall would come to Boston, but did say the Sox would not go to Washington.

President Johnson also said that there was no chance that Jennings can't manage the Cincinnati team next year. He also President Johnson added that Griffith will manage an American League club next season. Griffith will manage Washington.

A variation of this, as some of the writ correspondents put it, was that Griffith would buy the Providence club of the Eastern League and put Griffith in there as manager.

HICTANER—The Man That Lived in the Water

One of the Strangest Stories Ever Written

By Jean de la Hire

TO-DAY'S INSTALMENT

Copyright, 1911, By American-Journal-Examiner.

SMILING with confidence, Hictaner went toward Oxus and raised his arms.

Just below each of the armpits the silver scales had ceased to grow, leaving a circular space of white skin some three inches across. Those little round patches were marked by five horizontal openings, having the appearance of very fine gills. These were the exterior orifices of the lungs—the gills of the great man-fish, and it was they which made a hybrid of this young man, able to breathe and live in the water in the manner of fishes.

Oxus separated the thin openings with a careful finger.

"Open your mouth and breathe deeply," he said.

Hictaner obeyed. The water entered the mouth violently and almost as soon it had bubbled from the openings to the lungs.

The young man repeated the breathings rhythmically and evenly.

All this time Oxus was applying the exterior plate of his micro-telephone to Hictaner's thorax, back and thighs. Several times he thumped. Once he listened a long time.

Finally he raised his head, satisfied, and said:

"Very good, Oxus, our child was never better."

While these strange things were taking place in the submarine grotto one not less strange but more humanly tragic was going on in a subterranean chamber of the Lost Isle.

The Mad Woman's Mystery

WITHIN a quarter of an hour after Fulbert and Oxus had met in the laboratory Moisette came out of the apartment set apart for her use.

There were two rooms, each opening into a coquettish little Louis XV. salon. The young girl occupied one of the bedrooms, while her maid, Dora, a negress, was given the other so that she could be near her mistress.

Special conduits equipped with ventilators brought fresh air in from the outside, and in the corner of each room was an apparatus for absorbing carbon, as well as an electric heat radiator.

The inner air of the Lost Isle was always pure and perfumed while the temperature was kept always the same.

Dressed in the mess white frock with the scarlet sash, Moisette went along a straight passage for some distance and paused before a door. The young girl then pressed an ivory bell.

Almost immediately a door opened and she entered a little drawing room furnished only with divans, cushions and heavy draperies. There she was received by an old negress, who bowed and smiled at her.

"Bawsie," Moisette asked, "how is the head?"

"Much better, Mademoiselle," replied the slave.

"Is she up yet?"

"Madame Martha is already up."

"May I see her to-day?"

"Yes, indeed, Mademoiselle. I even think her added many come back this morning, as it sometimes does."

"Ah, all the better," exclaimed Moisette with a smile of pleasure. "But why do you think that?"

"I know Madame Martha so well," replied the negress, "that I cannot well be mistaken.

Dr. A. KEMPAL, Dept. 106 E. Havana, Cuba.

"Just now, when she waked, she said 'Good morning, Bawsie.' She rarely knows me.

"Then she asked if Mademoiselle were coming this morning."

Moisette reflected. She was thinking with a surprise that Madame Martha had never asked such a question before. She asked unconcernedly, though:

"Ah, Madame Martha asked if I were coming?"

"Yes, Mademoiselle."

"And what did you say?"

"I said yes. Then she began to cry and said she had had terrible dreams last night and that someone had advised her to confide in Mademoiselle Moisette.'

"To confide in me," exclaimed Moisette in surprise.

"Yes, and Madame went on to say that she had sad, sorrowful things to tell."

"Horrors!" said the young girl, growing pale.

"And, besides," went on the negress with enthusiasm, "Madame added that she would never again have a moment's sleep in peace if she did not 'unload her heart upon that of mademoiselle.' She said just those words."

"Why, she is not mad at all!" exclaimed Moisette.

"For the moment it seemed so. But I have seen her this way three or four times in the fifteen months she has been in my care. But it never lasted for more than an hour or so."

Only Smiled Once

"Has she never told you anything, Bawsie?"

"No," mademoiselle. Of course, at the Baleares she was much more silent than she is here. She has never once smiled except the day she first saw mademoiselle, eight months ago when my master brought us all to the Lost Isle."

"Yes, I know," answered Moisette, a little impatiently. "You were both at Majorca while I was at Cabera with my father. But will Madame Martha know me as soon as she sees me?"

"Oh, surely, mademoiselle, for she knew me at once. Besides, she is expecting you."

"Very well, I will go." Moisette exclaimed brightly.

The old negress went forward a little distance, knocked, hanging and opened a door. She stood aside to let the young girl pass, and closed the door quickly, remaining behind in the little salon, which she busied herself in dusting. Then she took up her place in the hall, as if to be on the watch.

Moisette had entered a large room with heavy draperies. At the right was a great canopied bed; at the left a low divan. Upon it, amid many cushions, was a woman half reclining.

The woman, lost in deep thought, did not hear the young girl's entrance. There, for Moisette was able to observe her closely before speaking.

Madame Martha must have been a very beautiful woman, for her fine, regular features still lent an air of distinction to the wasted, wrinkled face with its death pallor.

The long, thin hair made a silvery fleece for her brow, and was drawn into a loose coil in the back of her neck. She was large, and was dressed in a snowy flannel peignoir, drawn in at the waist by a blue cord. Her fine, slender hands lay spread out in her lap. They were pale as her face, with fine violet lines running through them to demark the veins.

The great dark eyes vaguely followed an indefinite train of thought. Though they were turned toward Moisette, they did not see her, for they were clouded with her inner visions.

Moisette watched the beautiful eyes, stranger and finer than usual because the face was so much more pale.

Behind, then, by a vague discomfort, as well as a childlike impatience, the young girl called gently:

"Madame!"

The poor creature trembled, her eyes blinked, and, standing upon the floor, she murmured, with outstretched arms:

"Ah, Moisette, dear! it is you! Moisette, is it you?"

Her eyes now were fixed upon the young girl with an expression of deep tenderness.

"Yes, madame, it is I, Moisette. Do you know me? How glad I am! Do you remember the last time you knew me? It was three months ago, I think."

"Three months! Three months!" repeated Madame Martha. "Yes, I remember."

The light shining then as it rose to her. What long, long shadows there have been since then. Three months ago! Yes, I remember. You wore this very same dress—and you had this same happy smile. You told me where we were. You told me I will soon remember. Ah, yes! That is it! I am in the desert of the ocean."

"Ah, Moisette, are we still at the Lost Isle? For I remember another isle where there were trees and flowers. How far it is away! Oh, God, how far away!"

Moisette was careful not to interrupt the poor invalid's reflections. She let her talk on, fearing lest she fall back into unconsciousness without making the mysterious confidences. The woman seized Moisette's hands and drew the young girl down beside her on the sofa as she talked. They were seated side by side, with clasped hands.

Three Dark Months

"Wait," said Madame Martha, "wait. Let me look at you. You are so beautiful. And have I spent three long months without knowing you—tell me—three long months?"

"Yes, madame."

"Alas! From whence came that night that has blinded my eyes and put my memory to sleep for I know not how long?

THE FINE ART OF COOKING THE TOMATO.

Monsieur Escoffier, the greatest French chef, continues his exclusive series of recipes in SUNDAY'S AMERICAN.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

THE opening scene of the story is laid in a mysterious house on the island of Cabera. Fulbert, a Buddhist monk of the Tibetan Lama, arrives and is greeted by Oxus, another monk. These two have discovered a way to gain world power by piecing the lungs of a fish in a man, enabling him to live under water as well as on land. Oxus expected his wife Bertha to give birth to a boy, upon whom the monk planned to experiment, but a girl is born instead.

Fulbert, however, goes to a Lamaist monastery in Spain and takes from Martha de Bilgiries her male infant born out of wedlock. The mother then dies mad.

Eighteen years later a mysterious person calling himself "The Unknown" notifies the various powers that unless they acknowledge him as their master he will bring them to his feet by blowing up their navies. The threats are not taken seriously, but finally several battleships of various countries are destroyed. Admiral Germinet, of a French squadron lying at Villefranche, is entitled to take his fleet to the Straits of Gibraltar and join forces with a British fleet to block the Mediterranean against the "Unknown." In the French fleet is the torpedo boat Victoire, commanded by Lieutenant Louis de Clieriat, whose friend is Ensign Hector Claude. While the two fleets are lying there several ships are destroyed by the "Unknown." A reign of terror sweeps the world. The "Unknown," however, posts an announcement of a truce for a month on a buoy in San Francisco Harbor.

The scene shifts back to Fulbert and Oxus, who are now in the island of Boa Ali, on the Arabian coast. They inhabit a mysterious grotto replete with wonderful electric devices, and also a subterranean chamber. "Hictaner," or the man-fish, comes into the chamber and talks to Oxus and Fulbert by means of signals. The two possess wear wonderful diving helmets and garments made of silver scales. It appears that Hictaner by means of his marvelous amphibious powers, and the help of a torpedo, or bomb carrier, is enabled to travel under water at incredible speed. Several, an engineer and also a member of the Lamaist order, is the inventor of the torpedo, but knows nothing of Hictaner. The two monks decide to impart the secret to Several. Fulbert tells how Oxus experimented as open until he produced one that could live in the water. Then he tells how Oxus married Ada (Fulbert's) sister, and it was decided that their first child, if a boy, should be the subject of their experiment to make a man-fish.

She, however, gave birth to a girl instead of a boy. They called her Moisette, Oxus's wife died soon after and the girl was trained Moisette. Oxus is plainly agitated at the mention of the girl's name, but his emotion is not noticed by the monks. Fulbert explains how a male child was obtained from the young woman in the Spanish monastery and tells how Oxus loved the lungs of a shark in the baby so that when it was two years old the child was able to live in the water and also on land, provided it did not remain out of water more than forty-eight hours. Fulbert declared that he taught the man-fish four languages and also instilled into his mind the signals. He gave him enemies and fishes his friends.

The call of the micro-telephone sets. She chides the two old men for being late for supper. The monks invite Several to dine with them. Several is intensely agitated in the presence of Moisette, who, however, regard him with indifference. The next day the two monks decide to visit Hictaner in the subterranean cavern. They don diving clothes and descend through a trap door into the water. By the aid of microphones their voices are able to penetrate the helmet covering so that they can talk to Hictaner. He proves to be a wonderfully handsome youth, with fine skin and perfect features.

He tells Oxus that he has done and they tell him that in future he may go about in the ocean and give him the liberty of the island, warning him not to speak to any men he may see, as they are slaves.

Now Go On With the Story

I must be like one dead during those periods of darkness."

"No, madame, no," stammered Moisette.

"You walk and eat and sleep—but you don't seem to see anyone or anything.

"When you speak, your voice is so, so low. A breath just seems to come from your lips as they move. And one can't understand nor hear."

Madame Martha looked at Moisette with a fixedness almost terrifying. The painful impression upon the young girl made her quiet. But the intense gaze did not leave her. She grew pale with uneasiness.

Suddenly the look grew gentler, and expressed an unspeakable tenderness, as Martha said in a trembling voice:

"Now, Moisette, it is daylight in my soul—bright daylight. I remember all. I can talk. I must talk. Do you hear, Moisette? Do you understand?"

"Yes, madame. I hear and I understand."

"Very well, dear. Listen! I must tell you all that has come to me."

"Last night I awakened with a start after frightful dreams. And the light which came then is still here. I lived over again my life of sorrow and tears.

"I thought of you, dear Moisette, you, whom I remembered seeing twice during my long night; like the light of two stars.

"I promised myself to tell you the long story of that sad life, so that you would pray for me—you, so innocent and so beautiful. Listen:

"But, I must make haste! I want you to know all before I fall back into that dreadful darkness where I am engulfed. Where I die, Moisette.

"I want to ask you exactly where we are, who you are, in whose sweet hands I find myself, what this Lost Isle is, and why the light of day is replaced each time my mind revives by the artificial light of those globes!"

"Madame!"

"No, don't say anything. Don't explain. What does it matter after all!

"I am condemned to see nothing, to hear nothing for long, long months of darkness and my eyes, my ears and my mind are only given back to rise for a moment and at such long intervals.

"But before to-day's light is gone, I will tell you. I will tell you!"

"Oh, Madame!" Moisette begged in a trembling voice and with tear-dimmed eyes.

The terrible earnestness of Madame's words had terrified the young girl, and the poor creature in her morbid moment was able to understand how painful an impression she was making upon Moisette.

She controlled herself quickly with all the effort of her newly returned will and calmly, in a tone at once affectionate and sad, she said:

Madame Martha's Story.

"Moisette, dear, don't be afraid! Listen to me for I must hasten to tell you the story of my life without explaining it. It should be done quickly and God, I hope, will give me time. Then, dear, this is over and pray for me!"

"Oh, yes, Madame, I promise you with my whole heart."

"Thank you, sister dear. The year a red comet crossed the sky I was the you, a beautiful young girl. Alas! I don't know how long ago that was."

"But Madame," exclaimed Moisette naively, "I am only eighteen years old and I have heard that a was born the year of the red comet."

"Ah!" groaned Madame. "How I must have suffered to have changed so that you are surprised.

"I am only thirty-six years old, and I must look far, far more than that. But let it pass. Quickly, listen, Hictaner!"

"But I am listening, Madame," said Moisette earnestly.

"Yes. Then it was eighteen years ago, when I met a young man who was a student in a city of southern France where I had gone to pay a two months' visit to a school friend.

"I loved him without knowing what love was.

"He loved me, or pretended to, and I allowed myself to be led into temptation—

"Then he disappeared.

"I was in despair, for when I returned home, I knew that my sin was to bear its bitter fruit. I told my story to my priest, but did not confess my lover's name.

The priest took pity on me, and under a false pretext he persuaded my family to send me for a time into a retreat, where my boy was born.

"For my honor's sake, I had promised to abandon the child and to never see it again. He was taken away. I never knew where."

"And you never saw Him again," exclaimed Moisette, pale with emotion.

"No, and it was perhaps in that way that God punished me most. But Hictaner, protected as to my family, I had two losses to mourn in secret, that of my lover, which I have always loved in spite of his faithlessness, and that of my son, whom I loved all the more because I had given him up."

"How you must have suffered!" murmured Moisette, her eyes filled with tears.

"Alas, that was little compared with what still awaited me," and the poor woman crumbled as she brought up once more her tragic past. But impatient, she hurried on.

Funny Stories of the Stage That Are True

(Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner. Great Britain Rights Reserved.)

By ROBERT GRAU

WHEN the late W. S. Gilbert came to this country in the early '80s to stage "Pinafore," he was employed at the incompetency of the American chorus.

He approached one young lady who had seemingly failed to learn the score and said:

"Will you tell me where you get your authority to sing in the chorus, madame?"

The American girl hesitated for a few seconds, and then, looking straight at Sir William, replied to the effect that she had been for several years a qualified chorister.

"But what are your qualifications, madame?" demanded the author.

"Perhaps I have none, but haven't I got to live?" pleaded the girl.

"Not necessarily," answered Gilbert, quickly.

When Edward E. Rice went to New York with one of his "Evangeline" companies, one of his principal advantages of the debtor laws of that day and had the impresario jailed.

Rice set about to dissolve his business affairs from Ludlow street jail. For companion at the time he had Napoleon S. Irwa, who, it is claimed, financed one of Rice's ventures a year or so later, as a result of the forced acquaintanceship.

Rice had special stationery printed, with the heading:

"Hotel Ludlow,
70 Ludlow street,
—101"

The number 101 was his cell number.

All of the letters he sent out had the following footnote:

"P. S.—Call at any hour. I am always in."

Vaudeville managers have not always been as enlightened and discerning as they are to-day.

In the early period of the era of refined vaudeville some of them were more or less deficient on some points that are regarded as very important to-day.

It was my business in the '90s to endeavor to secure attractions of a high grade. It was then the commencement of the uplifting process now so apparent. One of the first artists I was able to secure to dignify the two-a-day houses was the famous Signorina Del Puente, who was then as popular at the Metropolitan as Scotti is to-day.

Upon offering this great artist to a manager, who is to-day a millionaire, I received this response:

"I can't use any more magicians for some time."

To another manager I offered the great Hungarian violinist, Edouard Remenyi-Remenyi, who is to-day in an effort to obtain $500 a week for him. This was the response that came:

"Can she do her act in 'one'? If so, and she is a 'good looker,' I might have her open the show after the intermission."

Once I thought I would have a little fun, not dreaming that I would be taken seriously. It was customary for me to write to a certain important manager almost daily, listing my offerings and naming the prices for each.

I thought this particular manager so well informed that he would see the point and laugh at my little joke, but wait and see.

Among the attractions I offered to him was this one:

Nellie MELBA and EAMES Emma
Sister act
Open next week and after;
salary $80.00 per week.

Imagine my surprise a day or two later upon receiving a letter from this manager, in which he passed upon this offering as follows:

"In re Melba and Eames at $80. This looks attractive to me, provided they will do three shows a day, and have good photo display for the lobby. If O. K., advise, and I will send contracts for one week. If they make good I'll give them the entire circuit."

When Maria Dressler was a light opera comedienne, the company of which she was a principal made a one-night stop at the famous Arkansas Spa—Hot Springs. On the night of the performance Miss Dressler, "Billee Taylor," was being presented in a slowly-decreasing gaslight.

It so happened that in the love scene between Miss Dressler and the comedian—the lights were about two-thirds out then the following dialogue took place:

"Do you really love me, Eliza?"

"You bet I do."

"But how long will you love me, Eliza?"

Miss Dressler, with that nimble wit for which she is famous, responded:

"As long as the light lasts, Billy."

To Develop the Bust

I am so ashamed of my chin bust that I want to say that there is now known how to develop it. My bust and the rest of my body are right for the present style and I do not want to get larger, but my bust is so flat that I would try anything that gave hope of even three or four inches development.

MARY E.

The only thing I know of that will develop the bust without putting on flesh is the Mexican treatment called Tlemaxtli. It is a wonderful discovery of a woman physician of Mexico City, and is largely among her own sex and in most cases increases the bust from four to six inches in a few months. It is not a cream, lotion or plaster, but a little pellet (Tlemaxtli) which they will send you a full package for $1, postage prepaid, upon application. It is said to be of great value in cases of arrested development of the bust and will give a full, beautiful form without anyone knowing that you are using anything.

Many partners have told me that after the lady had been wearing the Tlemaxtli for a little and shrunken, but the use of the Kotex resumption made them fill and grow. Do not let this be long form, as they never lose their symmetry and have a full effect with the general appearance of the body. Tlemaxtli is sold by druggists generally, as they increase the size and health, and with the reward adds the form should be slender over-where except a generously developed bust.

GRAY HAIR

Wonderful Method. Your Hair Can be Darkened and Kept So

NO COMMON DYES

Gray hair is believed by most people to be evidence of weakening in physical and mental power. They think the loss of vitality in the hair proves a general falling in strength.

Those who have gray hair and who must rely upon employers or others are often compelled to fight this prejudice. It is particularly hard for the man with gray hair who has been thrown upon his own resources by business failure or mercantile changes and who must seek a new position.

Gray-Haired People Not Wanted

The gray-haired person soon realizes that younger looking men are chosen for positions. Although he may know some thing that selected who are really older than he is.

Among women, the one who possesses hair of the natural dark or dark brown shade (rather than gray, white or bleached) excels with the slightest favor.

As a matter of fact, gray hair has nothing to do with old age. It is simply a loss of color and vitality. It is caused by the absence of the pigmentary glands in the hair follicles, due to such causes as a shock, fever, wearing of tight hats, neglect in caring for the hair, etc.

Dangerous, Nasty Dyes

Only those can afford gray hair who are made prosperous. All others ought to take the necessary steps to restore the natural shade.

Many of the gray-haired people, realizing the mistake of using what are commonly known as hair stains, dyes, dyeing combs, etc. It would be quite a trouble to use ink or shoe polish. These dyes deceive nobody except those who use them. Any observer is mistaken and everybody knows it. Besides the dyes are nasty, sticky, messy things. They stain the scalp, discolor the skin, coloring, pillows, etc., and ugly streaks of strange shades color the hair. The sight becomes unbearable to most observers, but unfeeling to those who sympathize with the person who has felt it necessary to adopt such undesirable.

Restoration of Color

Scientists have been studying the problem for years, and at last the best Treatment has been evolved, which has its object not merely in restoring the hair to the natural shade of youthful days, but in developing a luxuriant, silky, glossy, beautiful growth.

The hair roots and glands are reached as a result obtained by no other method, and the most possible results are attained. The hair does not change its color in a few hours, as in the case with the worthless dyes, which not only make the hair appear ridiculous, but seriously damage it and hasten baldness. On the contrary, this new Method not only restores the natural color, but the appearance is that of improving health and vigor.

Valuable Book Free

Once the new Method is obtained, it is practically permanent. Inasmuch as only occasional further slight applications will keep the hair in perfect condition, guaranteed up to the eight-fifth year of age.

The cost of the new Method is very small and, as compared with the expense of frequently procuring cheaply colored hair dyes, is almost nothing. The Kokott Laboratory, 1209 Broadway, has a very interesting book, which tells how to improve and preserve the hair, will be sent absolutely free. No other book has ever told what you can learn by reading this. It has 250 pages and is profusely illustrated in half-tone, duo-chrome and three-color printing, consisting of charts, diagrams and other valuable matter.

Now suppose, for the sake of playing a game, that you were to be sent to a desert island, there to live the rest of your days. Everything you desire is to be at your service in unlimited profusion except books. Of these you may have only ten, and these ten you must select yourself before the ship sails to your island paradise.

What ten would you take?

They are to last you all your life. Therefore, any book that is worth only one reading you would not select. You will be wiser to choose those which may be read again and again. They must give you comfort, entertainment, counsel; they must stimulate the memory and the imagination; they must be so good and so substantial that you can read them over and over again and find in them something new each time.

What ten would you take?

This is not so much a fool game as it might appear. With the tremendous increase of books in the world it is becoming a serious question what we shall try to read. It is clear enough that we cannot read them all, or any considerable portion of them all.

Hence it is wise for every one to have up his sleeve—so to say—a few favorite books that are solid enough to be to him as good friends. Therefore, if you answer this question, you may clear up your own thoughts on the subject, and probably help some one else to do the same. So once more:

What ten would you take?

II.

We all read more or less badly. By this, I mean we read too many books, and none deeply or thoughtfully enough. But with a background of the best books, to be read repeatedly, one can afford to do light reading without missing all the joys of deep reading. Certainly there are many novels, books of adventure and the like that are not worth reading twice, but which are entertaining enough for one reading.

We ought to have this pleasure, but we should not be confined to light reading alone. A little more of the solid sort now and again keeps the mind in line with the best. It acquaints us with the hills of thought—hard to climb, to be sure, but offering a fine view, and showing us that it is wise, now and then, to climb a hill and look around.

A reader of this paper has sent me the following:

"In a scrapbook, which I have kept for many years, I find two lists of good books often to each. Perhaps your readers may be interested to have them. They are supposed to be, in each case, the best ten books for a desert island.' I do not know who made these lists.

"The first is this: (1) The Bible, (2) Shakespeare, (3) Milton, (4) 'Blackstone's Commentaries,' (5) Hugo or Carlyle, (6) Emerson, (7) Woodsworth, (8) Tennyson, (9) a dictionary, (10) 'Don Quixote.'

"In the second ten are three books that occur in the first: The Bible, Shakespeare and 'Don Quixote.' The others are Homer, Dante, 'Arabian Nights,' 'Pickwick Papers,' 'Robinson Crusoe,' 'Vanity Fair,' and Burton's 'Anatomy of Melancholy.'

"Perhaps no other person in the world would select either of these lists. I wonder how these lists will strike your readers?"

What ten would YOU take?

FOR Baring, indeed, he experienced something that was almost akin to contempt. There was an impassable gulf fixed between them, Baring belonged to England, to the weak, foolish and timorous past. He believed in conventions and was ashamed to face truth naked.

And like the man of whom he had read aloud so frequently from the lectern in the stately choir of Ronesect Cathedral, "Who hath not the fear of God before his eyes," he talked boastfully as they rode; talked as arrogantly out of his ignorance as John Saxe might have talked out of the fullness of his many years of experience, of Africa and things African and of the abysmal ignorance of England concerning both.

Yet, for all his expansiveness it struck Baring that there was a certain reticence behind it. There was something furtive in the look of the bleached blue eyes; this was a man with something to conceal.

The Black Brotherhood

"They talk a lot of infernal nonsense at home about our black brothers," Mardindale broke out, suddenly, as they rode homewards. "I'd like to give some of those radical leader writers a week of brotherhood in a West African village, tell you they are all right so long as you keep your heel on them firmly. Show a moment's weakness and they spring on you with a knife. It's the same with everything in Africa—the whole land is a remorseless battlefield—man against man—beast against beast; didn't you notice it even in the forest—the eternal warfare of growth—the vending struggle between the trees and the creepers that strangle them? You've got to beat or be beaten—there is no neutral ground."

He spoke as a man on his defence might have done, Baring thought, and wondered what had called forth the fierce tirade.

Here in this place of soulit plains it was easy to forget the dark influence of the forest that showed only like a dim smudge on the horizon. There was no suggestion of warfare in anything that had been during this ride over a vast, well ordered estate that seemed to stretch on all sides as extensively as an English county.

Baring's Pony Runs Away

His thoughts had occupied him so intently as to be almost his undoing. His pony, taking fright at some imaginary danger lurking in the tall grass that fringed the bridle track along which they rode, sibed violently and bolted. It was with difficulty that he drew it up at last, after a mad, endangering gallop among the thorn bushes that tore at the animal's flanks and at his own clothes.

His felt disheveled and full of African irritability when he rode presently into the courtyard where Mrs. Saxe waited to greet them.

Kitty's solicitude would have soothed down the vanity of a half-caste, and Baring had little enough. He laughed at him self happily.

"I'm sorry for the blot of a pony," he said. "I know these wounds fester horribly. For myself, I have only a profound regret for my unfortunate coat."

His held up an arm, from which fell away a tattered sleeve, laughingly.

"That—that's nothing. If you saw my habit sometimes! I'll settle that for you in a minute or two if you'll leave the coat out. Or, no—give it to me now——"

Baring protested, as she took it from him laughingly, and Martindale stood aside listening to their laughter with a lowering face.

She was conscious of his disapproval as she passed into an inner room to hunt for her work basket, and the laughter died out of her eyes.

The basket was hidden in a sin-filled settee to protect it against the ravaging white ants; as she opened the box and bent over it the torn sleeve of Baring's coat hanging over her arm caught on a nail in the side and was torn further. Impatiently she wrenched it free, and the hasty movement caused a packet of papers to fall from the coat, scattering into the open box.

With an impatient exclamation she groped after them.

Then her face paled. Among those fallen papers one lay uppermost; a letter with an imposing embossed heading, out of which two words stared up at her arrestingly —"Corlyne Chase."

Read Letter Twice

With a quick indrawing of the breath she dropped the coat, picked up the letter and read it through twice.

So her first suspicions had been right, after all. He was a spy, this laughing, clear-eyed English boy. A spy sent out from England to hunt out not John Martindale, the masquerader—but the man who had been Vivian Carr, the man the world called John Saxe.

The heat was intolerable. Kitty, racked by a nervous headache that defied all the effects of quinine, tossed under her mosquito net and prayed for sundown. It would go as suddenly as it had come, the headache, she knew that, but till it went she was helpless.

It tortured her to think of John Martindale alone in the company of the man she knew now to be a spy, yet she had not dared to warn him. She was too much afraid of his variable moods to trust him at present. She tried to comfort herself with the thought that so far as she knew Baring's present instructions were merely to ascertain the actual existence of John Saxe.

She tried—she could not help but try, though the effort increased her pain—to piece together the information contained in the letter she had read, with her remembrances of vague details let slip from time to time by her dead husband regarding that man he had so resolutely determined to ignore.

The facts that she did piece together from her vague memories seemed to form a fairly coherent whole when, later, her headache abated, she was able to set them out in orderly array before her. Roughly speaking, they were these:

The Heir to Millions

John Saxe, or to call him by his real name, Vivian Carr, had he been alive, stood heir to all the immense fortune left by his uncle, Sir Caroline Carr, a fortune so vast that the incidentals of the estate of Carlyne Chase and the entail thereof were lost sight of altogether. In England it was known that Vivian Carr was not dead, so much she had gathered from the English papers. Having had not been brought up with him, but only one man in England (for Lord Robert Printon was dead) knew that John Saxe, the West African trader, and Vivian Carr were one and the same. And that man was the writer of the letter to Laurence Baring, which she had lighted on by accident when it fell from his coat that morning.

Of the writer of the letter Kitty knew very little; it was signed "Richard Carr," and she surmised that Richard Carr was the cousin of her dead husband, the son of the younger brother of "John Saxe's" youth, who was the next-of-kin after him and therefore heir to Sir Carlous Carr's fortune. But the crude fact that stood out above all others in the woman's mind was this, that in England there was a man to whose every great advantage it would be to discover that John Saxe in West Africa, who stood between him and fortune, was an impostor and a masquerader.

And the question that beat itself intensely against her brain was:

"Did by any chance this spy, Laurence Baring, suspect the truth—that this man here in Nokpore, who called himself "John Saxe," was an impostor—a masquerader?"

WILL THEY DARE DO THIS AT NEWPORT?

Fashionable society threatens to take up the new Crazy Beach Dance which a Parisian beauty has popularized in Europe. See the Great Pictorial Magazine Section of SUNDAY'S AMERICAN.

It was inevitable that Baring must be familiar with portraits of Vivian Carr—the real John Saxe; as a boy, as a young man, he had been photographed and painted; she herself had photographs hidden away . . . Had the dissimilarity of Martindale to these portraits given the lie to the identity he claimed?

In her deception she had not replied on any miraculous resemblance between Martindale and the dead man; she had relied on their act of self-ostracism; on the unparalleled isolation of this place. Then, there was a superficial resemblance—in height and build and coloring—but that was all. . . .

Four million hours at least of hard disagreeable work are saved the women of this nation every week by Fels-Naptha soap. That is 208 million hours, or 26 million working days of 8 hours each every year.

Isn't that a record for Fels-Naptha to be proud of? Then there's the saving in health, in the wear of clothes, and in lots of other ways as well. More than a million women are using Fels-Naptha every wash-day.

It takes Fels-Naptha in cold or lukewarm water about half the time it would take by the old-fashioned hot-water way. Try it next wash-day yourself. Soap your white clothes with Fels-Naptha, roll them and let them soak for 30 minutes. Then give a light rub, rinse thoroughly, and hang on the line.

No hot fire to blister your face, no steaming suds to scald your hands, no nauseating smell about the house, no back-breaking work over the washboard. Isn't it worth trying?

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS; FINANCIAL NEWS

RECOVER WALL STREET LOSSES

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—A weak tone prevailed at the opening of the short session of the stock market, the first prices of nearly all the active industrials and railroads showing material fractional losses. Amalgamated Copper and American Smelting both yielded ¾ and the state of sentiment of loss was sustained by Steel common and Union Pacific. Southern Pacific, Atchison and Erie common opened unchanged. At the end of fifteen minutes of brief trading, a somewhat more developed and recoverable tone noted. Reading was better supported in the early trading than any other of the active railroad issues, yielding only ⅝ at the opening and subsequently recovering a part of this loss. Strength in the hard coal issue was confined to the opening hour. It is reported that insiders are making a market in these securities in anticipation of a government order to dissolve the Reading Company. The same was done in the cases of Standard Oil and the American Tobacco Company. The curb opened quiet.

Americus and Southern Pacific in London were steady.

GLIDDEN MEN NEAR ATLANTA

By DUNCAN CURRY.

ANDERSON, S. C., Oct. 20.—After traveling steadily for seven days the Glidden tourists arrived here yesterday afternoon, after a fast trip of 163 miles, having covered 914 miles of their 1,900 miles journey to Jacksonville, Fla.

Yesterday the tourists left North Carolina behind them and crossed the State line into South Carolina en Greer, fifty-two miles south of Charlotte. The roads while fair, were not anywhere near as good as those of yesterday, and as they are made of clay, there were far fewer pleasantries, for practically all of the cars made the contests easily within the limits. Not only this but many of the machines, after having rolled in roads south of Roanoke, rejoiced in veritable boulevards, including the Federal track and one of the finest motor-roads which had been existing for twenty-four hours.

The Reo and Federal trucks have been doing wonderful work, and the fact that the latter can come over almost impassable roads that have been traversed seems almost incredible.

We passed through a section of the South yesterday that seems to have become aroused to the commercial possibilities. Every town now seems to have and only the cotton gins they always possessed, there have added huge cotton factories, where the raw cotton which used to be sent to New England is now turned into cloth.

Girl-in-the-Office, Don't Be a Gossip!

If You Want to Be Something More Than a Stenographer, if, for Instance, You Are Ambitious to Be a Secretary, at Not Less Than $1,200 a Year, Confine Your Thought and Your Conversation During Business Hours to Strictly Professional Topics.

A young woman in West Medford wrote the other day to the editor of this newspaper to ask just what training, what experience, what skill and what special gifts are necessary to equip one for the work of a confidential secretary. "I shall never be content to be a typewriter," she says, "and only a typewriter."

The request and the letter of the West Medford young person were somewhat out of the ordinary run of the day's mail. Most young women who write letters to the newspapers want to know how to tell if "he" really loves, or perhaps is only giddy. Languishing Lydias write for advice on how to get "him" back.

So we put this request up to some of the more elderly of our young reporters. We figured that these elderly young reporters, marching in and out of the best offices in the town, ought to know just the sisterly young woman who could rightly advise the ambitious young miss of West Medford.

It seems to be the opinion of the young men of the AMERICAN staff who keep in touch with such things that one of the best regulated offices in Boston is that of Mr. Louis D. Brandeis, the eminent "attorney for the people." Mr. Brandeis in his offices possesses a jewel in the person of Miss Alice Harriet Grady, confidential secretary. Everything in the Brandeis office moves like machinery. There is a place for everything. Everything is in its place, from the latest magazine clipping on "scientific management" to the most recent paper touching on Tobacco Trust litigation. Miss Grady has a splendid staff of competent assistants.

We feel like boasting in big type of the fact that Miss Grady has consented to outline in the Sunday AMERICAN—not only for our young friend at West Medford, but for every woman who reads the AMERICAN—the requisities for success in office and secretarial work. Miss Grady's paper on "Service" will appear exclusively in to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN. We regard it as one of the best in the long line of features with which our Sunday readers are familiar.

For instance, Miss Grady writes about gossip in the office. (She writes about a number of things, but we select this in order to suggest what is in store for you):

> What a transformation would be wrought if the women would discipline themselves into confining their thought and their conversation during business hours to strictly professional topics. The aggregate increase in economic efficiency which would thus be realized can hardly be estimated. There is a certain trio of evils which under all circumstances and at whatever cost are to be avoided—gossiping, grumbling and jealousy. In business, as in social life, they are the "little foxes that spoil the vines." They will blight the sturdiest loyalty and kill enthusiasm in the bud.

We advise every young woman at work in the office of a busy man, and every other young woman ambitious to be so employed, to read Miss Grady's paper in to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

P. S.—On second thought, we offer the same advice to every young man in business life in New England.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

THE MONROE DOCTRINE AND THE NAVY

Editor AMERICAN:

The quarrels of Germany and France over Morocco and Italy and Turkey over Tripoli remind us that it has taken only a few years for Europe to finish the game of "grab" and subdivide the second largest continent for exploitation.

South America has 45,000,000 inhabitants, compared with Africa's 127,000,000. The natural and undeveloped resources of South America and Central America taken together surpass those of Africa, and the swarms of Europe and the hordes of Asia are beginning to seek their virgin soil and undeveloped wealth. For eighty-eight years the Monroe Doctrine has stood Gibraltarlike to prevent European exploitation of the southern republics. Will it be able to stand its greatest test now rapidly approaching in this twentieth century? This will all hinge on the strength and efficiency of the United States navy, for, as frequently said, "The Monroe Doctrine is only as strong as the United States navy." I believe in arbitration, but in no treaty that will destroy the Monroe Doctrine.

WOULD SAVE WIFE FIRST

Editor AMERICAN:

Should one save his mother or his wife first? I should like to give my opinion. Now, I am a man of thirty years; I have a mother, wife and two daughters, all of which I love very dearly; but if I were traveling at sea and the boat capsized, I being able to swim, whom should I save first—my mother, my wife or my children? My wife, by all means! Why? Because she is my wife.

She has given up all she had for me; both, her beauty, her chances of better condition, and lost she has to her life to bear my children. To her, I owe my life to my mother, but was it for me she suffered? No. It was for the man she loved—my father.

Of course, she has the cares of me, but children are a form of luxury.

New England's Greatest Poison Murder Mystery

In the murder of Miss Avis Linnell and the arrest of the Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson, the handsome young pastor of a Baptist church in Cambridge, for the crime, New England has a crime that is unprecedented in its history in many ways.

All of the elements that a fertile minded dramatist would utilize in an effort to captivate an audience are in this tragedy in life and death. The love interest predominates. The Rev. Mr. Richeson was in love with Miss Linnell, the charming little Cape choir singer, and she idolized the handsome, magnetic Virginian. They became engaged.

Then the clergyman fell in love again—this time with a daughter of a prominent Brookline family. He became engaged to marry Miss Violet Edmands. The wedding was set for the last day of this month. But still the friends and relatives of Miss Linnell believed that he was going to marry her.

That was the situation when Miss Linnell, boarding at the Young Women's Christian Association in Boston, was found dying from poison last Saturday evening.

It was first thought that it was a case of suicide. Chief Dugan, the head of the Boston Bureau of Criminal Investigation, took hold of the case. As soon as he had made an investigation of it he pronounced it a fiendish murder.

Chief Dugan told this fact to the newspapers and welcomed their help, like the wise detective that he is. As a result of the facts that the newspapers secured and published, the story of the purchase of cyanide of potassium by the Rev. Mr. Richeson came to Deputy Superintendent Watts and the arrest was promptly made.

Chief Dugan and Deputy Superintendent Watts are to be congratulated on their aggressive action in this remarkable case. They have shown themselves to be alert and efficient police officials, and the manner in which they have handled this case will have a deterrent effect on crime in this city.

The finale of the grim tragedy—one that has thrilled all of New England—will be written in the courts.

To-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN will have the best story of this amazing crime, with its wonderful love element, that will be printed. Order the paper to-day if you want to make sure of getting it.

The Polo Coat

By CHESTER FIRKINS

I DIDN'T wail nor mouth nor mope
When She—the siren of my flat,
Queen of my heart and purse and hope
Pinned a white rabbit on her hat.
(Medusa wore worse things than that
In times artistic and remote);
I shall not leave my habitat
Until she buys a polo coat.

What time, upon a ten-foot rope,
She swung a hand-bag, small and fat,
I whined not, but went out to grope
For coin to buy that lariat.
I never even caused a spat
By jesting on the things she'd tote:

And even now I shall not blat,
Until she buys a polo coat.

Oh, direst thing in Fashion's dope!
Oh, tomb of Beauty—square and flat!
Will I endure you near me?—Nope.
Nor empress nor aristocrat
Could capture me where you are at
Let Indian belles on blankets dote.
Why should MINE hand the weepy chat
Until she buys a polo coat?

Has polo ALL these fads begat?
A PONY coat was last year's note;
And now She's hopeless—having that—
Until she buys a polo coat.

The Road to Yesterday

By PERCY SHAW

WHEN you hear a friend lamenting for the good days that were, wake up your mind he is a stockholder in the Road to Yesterday.

This road runs through a pleasant country, through fields rich with the flowers of might-have-been, over babbling streams of lost opportunity. Regrets and sophistries are its dividends, and its shareholders are legion.

We all know them; the man who attempted some great project, who suffered robust twenty flouts, and did not try again the twenty-first; the woman who defied adversity and then succumbed to it; the sparkling lights of our school days for whom we predicted great place, who possessed brilliance but lacked ambition—these are investors in the Road to Yesterday.

Yet they are not satisfied with their investment; they paint it in roseate colors to you merely to convince themselves. They are our ancient mariners with the stale albatross of lethargy hanging round their necks.

They look ahead into the untrodden wilderness—the hard path you may be setting out on—where the way is not even surveyed. They see the forests of unbelief, they sharp rocks of public scorn and scoffing, the morasses of opposition that must be bridged, and they shudder. There are no such unpleasant obstacles along the Road to Yesterday, and so they make their excuse their justification.

You hear people say of a derelict, "Well, he came from a good family," or "His father was rich," or "His mother was the daughter of Judge So and So." They are unconsciously paying tribute to his forbears; they are trying to conceal his unfortunate investment in the Board to Yesterday.

It is all in vain; for these investors buy their stock with one priceless, that they shall forever prolong it. They have swindled themselves, but they must not let the world know it. They would persuade you to buy, because they fear they can never sell.

Their barrow is everywhere—on the street corner, in the market place, at church, energy, hard work, ambition, hope, providence, are the forfeits they demand for shares in the Road to Yesterday, yet when the trade is completed they cannot use them; the payments are lost.

Can you redeem your stock in the Road to Yesterday? Only after bitter struggle, deprivation, heart-burning; for it is as hard to redeem as easy to buy.

Once you have succeeded you will see in your mind's eye a silver thread stretching through the wilderness; it can be made a reality; it is the right of way to the Road to To-morrow.
